DIRECTIONS

DIRECTIONS for Travellers, &c. when to pass the Severn between England nd Wales.

At Aust (or the Old Passage) it is about two miles over to Beachley, in the parish of Tidenham, Glocestershire. This is the direct way to Newent, Newnham, and all the Forest of Dean, Herefordshire, Worcestershire, and the upper part of Monmouthshire.

At the New Passage, it is about three miles over at high water to Port Skewith, near St. Pierre, in Monmouthshire. This is the direct way to Cardiff, Caerleon, Pontypool, and most parts of South Wales.

As the croffing at either of the above Passages depends on the winds, it is necessary to observe, that they distinguish but two winds for passing, viz. winds below, and winds above.

Winds below, are when it blows up the river Southerly or Westerly. With these you may pass during the ebb or going out of the tide, which is 7 hours.

Winds above, are when it blows down the river Northerly or Easterly: with these there is 5 hours passing, on the flood or coming in of the tide. When the wind is S. E. or N. W. it is directly across the river, therefore you must be at the Passage where you intend to cross, an hour before high water.

The difference of passing at Aust and the New Passage, varies about an hour; tide coming in, wind above, New Passage is an hour sooner than Aust; tide going out, wind below, Aust is an hour sooner than New,

Prices of Passage.

A four wheel carriage 10s. Two wheel ditto 5s. Man and Horse 1s. Horse alone 8d. Foot passenger 6d. Cattle per head 6d. Sheep or pigs per score 2s. 6d.

N. B. A finall boat hired on purpose to cross over is 5s. exclusive of passage.

T will be proper to inform the Readers of this Work, who might possibly have expected some slight and slimsy apology for a Guide to accompany the Directory, that they are now prefented with a new, authentic, methodical History, Survey and Description of Bristol; which have been much wanted, at a moderate price; and which, the Writer hopes will be fatisfactory to inhabitants, vifitants and travellers. The Subscribers will have, over and above their expectation, information concerning this City, fufficient (if printed more at large) to fill a handsome volume in octavo: and will, it is prefumed, be so kind as to let the extension. and variety of the Work apologize for the delay of Publication. The Author has not reviewed the Sheets to discover typographical errors, hopes they are but few, fuch as will not materially affect the fense, and may be easily rectified by the Reader; and shall be thankful to Clerical and Literary gentlemen for correction of mistakes, and hints for future improvement and augmentation, directed to the Publisher.

Translation of the Latin motto in the Title.

Bristolia, losty, spacious, faithful, fair, Sweet, famous, old, kind, neat beyond compare; Maintains the Nation's rights, her God adores, Her Sov'reign loves, protects the British shores; Foul crimes detests, and seeks their swift decrease, And thus enjoys a blest, internal peace.

CHAP. I.

Of the Situation of BRISTOL, and its Advantages.

HE City Briftol lies in 51 deg. of N. Lat. 2. 46, W. Long. 2t the Southern extremity of Glocestershire, and the Northern of Somersetshire: being a City and County independent of both, but generally reckoned in Somersetshire. It is 115 miles due West from London; through Bath 123; 12 W. N. W. of Bath; 179 N. E of Falmouth; 80 N. E of Exeter; 149 E of Milford-Haven; 34, S. W. by S. of Glocester; 50 S. S. W. of Worcester; 106 S. by E of Chefter; 188 S. of Liverpool; 228 S.W. of York; 220 W. by S. of Norwich; and 68 W. by S. of Oxford. It has two Rivers which run through it, the Avon andthe Froom; its principal is the Avon, and the City is built at about 8 miles from its mouth or discharge into the Bristol Channel or Severn Sea. It stands in a most delightful and healthy Country, and is surrounded with numerous verdant Hills, fome of moderate, and others of towering height, particularly to the North, which defend it from the cold winds and render its fituation very warm and comfortable. The circumjacent Country is variegated with high and wholesome Downs, sweetened with odoriferous Plants and Herbs; fruitful Valleys, watered with Rivers, Springs, Brooks and Rivulets; fublime Rocks; thick Woods; beautiful Scenes of Nature; and most pleasing Prospects of Land and Water and considerable extent of Country. In its vicinity are many pleasant and handsome Villages, feats of Nobility and Gentry happily fituated; thefe and the abovementioned circumstances, always attract the attention and excite the approbation of Travellers and Foreigners.

By Bristol, we would be understood to mean, the City, and all its inhabited Environs that pertain to it, and are connected with it. And a general description of its situation thus taken, is, that it stands on a Vale, and on losty Hills to the N; N. W. and W. of it. But though the summits of those Hills, Kingsdown, St. Michaels, Brandon, and Clifton Hills, may be 250 Feet or upwards, in perpendicular height above the Rivers; and though the lower Buildings of Bristol appear from their tops to be in a deep Valley, yet various parts of the City and Suburbs are on fine elevations from the Rivers, which are not so steep as to be inconvenient for Trade or Carriages.

The old Town or City, primarily built, and which was within the inner Wall, stands on a Hill 40 feet high between the Rivers Avon and Froom, from which eminence there is every way a decent.

cent. Thus the heart of the City which is most crowded, being feated on a Hill, and the streets intersecting each other at right angles in several places, has a free admission and circulation of Air.

This City is faid to refemble very much ancient Rome; its plan being nearly circular, with a greater diameter one way than another; and the River cutting off about a fixth part from the rest. Alfo, it stands on seven Hills; and its principal River, the Avon, is fimilar to the Tyber in width, colour and rapidity. Its Hills, are 1st. that on which stands the old Town, the walls of which were nearly circular and had fix Gates. 2d. That on which stood the Caffle to the E. which is bounded by the Avon on the S. the Froom on the N: and W; and by a deep Ditch or Moat, (now partly arched over) on the E. 3d. To the W. the College-Green. which is a confiderable and pleafant eminence, and on which stands the Cathedral Church. 4th. To the South of the Avon, at about three Furlongs from Briftol Bridge, Redcliff-Hill, on which are. the famous Church of that name, its Church-Yard, and several other Streets and Places. 5th. St. Michaels-Hill. 6th. Kingfdown; the boundary or chaim between these two last being in Mills's Gardens, upper Maudlin-Lane. 7th. Brandon Hill, the chasm between which and St. Michael's Hill, is Park-Street. On this Hill are lately erected, Berkely Square, Great George Street, Charlotte Street, and feveral other Buildings: and it is hoped that the Corporation will foon (referving the upper part for Prospect) let out all the rest for Building; and effect below and above an elegant and convenient junction between Bristol and the parish of Clifton. These three last grand eminences are in general covered with handsome houses and gardens, rising Street over Street to the very top, most of which command a delightful and extensive view of the City and Country for feveral miles around. Strangers, who are spectators from the opposite Hills, and from some parts of the City and Suburbs, are struck with agreeable surprize, at the fight of a large Town, hanging in a continued flope, as it were from the very Clouds. From these, and many other Hills about Bristol, particularly Montpelier to the N. the City, its two greatest Churches, the Cathedral and Redcliff, and its other lofty curious and elegant Towers and Steeples, make an august and venerable object.

The Valleys and Hills of Briftol, are covered with public and private Buildings of various Materials and Constructions. Its upper parts stand principally on Rocks, and its lower, some on red Marl, and others on thick hard beds of Sand or Coals. The ground under the surface, is perforated with Drains and common Sewers in all directions: and the two Rivers, which run all through the Town, and turn and wind to so many parts of the Valleys, receive, and carry off all the Filth and with it noxious Effluvia. Perhaps there is not a house which has not a communication with the main Sewers: a provision for cleanliness not so universal in any City in the World.

Thus is Bristol, by Nature and Situation a most healthy Town: many agreeable circumstances render it so. A few Fathoms under ground is excellent Water. Its Air is well known and experienced to be undeniably and notably falubrious. Its Soil is dry; and the damps of some moift Countries and Atmospheres are here unknown. Some Invalids of Bristol whom Business or Curiosity have led to Lendon, have foon found themselves worse than before, and obliged to make a hafty retreat to their Native Air.

The advantageous circumstances of the situation of Bristol, taken all together, perhaps cannot be paralelled in Britain. A deep, navigable River flows through the very middle of it, which will bring a Ship of more than 1000 Tons up to Bristol Bridge. This River flows with such a strong and rapid course, that the largest Vessels go up and down in one Tide. Several Ships of War, of from 40 to 70 guns were built here for Government, during the late conteit with America. Its convenience for Trade is every way apparent, Its own River is navigable to the spacious, populous and elegant City of Bath. It stands so near to the confluence of the River Avon with the Severn, that it enjoys the Navigation and Trade of that great River and adjacent Country; and of a vast extent of Sea Coasts down the Bristol Channel; of Somerset, Devon, and Cornwall to the Lands-End, and of Southern Wales to Milford-Haven, Ireland is just at the mouth of its Channel, whose neighbourhood and Trade, are undoubtedly very beneficial to it. It enjoys the benefit of a mineral Water, and of a great refort and residence of Nobility and Gentry, especially in the months of Summer. It stands in the midst of a Coal Country, the veins of which run under its Streets. It is surrounded with Collieries, not only in Kingswood on the Glocestershire side of the River, but also on the Somerset side. It has in its environs quarries of various forts of Stone for Lime, Building and Paving. St. Vincents Rocks, the quarries of Dundry, Downend, &c. would furnish Stone enough to build and pave a City larger than Babylon: therefore Fuel, and the materials for Building, are less expensive here, than at most other great and populous Towns.

Not to enlarge on the great plenty of the necessaries of life, in the Counties of Glocester, Somerset and Wilts, which supply the inhabitants of Bristol; its vicinity to Wales and the fruitful county of Glamorgan, occasions a great and continual importation of Poultry, Pigs, excellent Salt Butter, Eggs and Fruit, besides what it receives from the other English counties. With all these Advantages, Bristol has gradually risen to the rank of the second City in England, for Extent, Population, Trade, Opulance, Increase and importance to Government, and to the whole Nation.

CHAP. II.

Antiquity, Names, earliest Accounts of Bristol, to William the First.

WHEN Julius Cæsar invaded Britain, he sound it sull of inhabitants: and it is not improbable that its popularity might have existed for many previous ages; how many, are known only to HIM, who knoweth all things. There is great reason to conclude, that long before the invasion of the Romans, such an advantageous, eligible situation, as that on which the ancient City was built, had not escaped the notice of the Britons, and that it had been an elected and savoured place of habitation. Standing on a pleasing eminence between two Rivers, watered by the confluence of the Rivers on three sides, being so convenient for desence, and having such an easy communication with the Ocean, there is no doubt that it had been long a seat of our British ancestors. Whether constructed of Mud or Hurdles, the great antiquity of this place of residence will not be disputed by a very superficial Observer,

That there was a Roman Camp at Clifton we shall produce the following proofs. Tacitus says, that "Ostorius (about the year of Christ 50) extended his victorious Arms upon the banks of the Severn, and secured that River, and the Avon." And in another place "Ostorius took away the Arms of those who were suspected,

36 and restrained those on the rivers Avon and Severn, surrounding " them with Camps." In the itinerary of Antoninus, a station or camp of the Romans, was noticed by the name of Abone or Avone, (the British name of the River) situated between Agaa Solis, Bath, and the River Severn. William of Worcester who wrote in 1480, and mentions the fortified camp on Clifton Hill adds, " And that fuch a Fortress, was " in all likelihood founded there in ancient Times, there remains " to this day, in a great circle, a heap of Stones, great and small, " feattered and spread abroad. It is very wonderful to behold " thefe Stones, globularly lying in fuch order, and in a great " circle; for there feems to have been a very firong castrum, which eo is faid to have been for some hundred years past, and is nowlevel-" led with the ground. And it therefore is, an honor and ornament, to my native country Briftol, to have or hear of the foundation of such noble fortresses and camps. I write this for the " fake of commemorating this camp or fortrefs,

Other proofs of there having been a Roman camp on Clifton Hill, are, the ditches and aggera still to be seen; and the many Roman coins of Nero, Domitian, Trajan and other Emperors that have been dug up there. Also when Sir Wm. Draper levelled the ground near to the camp, a curious Roman Urn with two handles, tiles, bricks, and broken potsherds were found there. In 1783 Roman coins were found in digging the foundations of the new houses near to those remains of the camp which are still left for speculation. It is, further, remarkable, that under Kingsweston Hill mear to the River, was a common Field called Avon's Town, as mentioned in the rental of Sir Ralph Sadlier, dated 36, Hen 2. "One acre in campo Abone Town." Here have been found coins of Nero, Vespasian, Constantine, &c.

In a manuscript of Abel Wantner, in the Bodleian Library, it is said, "At Pollbury where Trim goeth into the Avon, much coin "has been found, conjectured to be the ancient station of the Ro-" mans between Bath and Avington, mentioned by Antoninus the Emperor in his Journal Book." These, and the great number of Roman coins that have been found at Henbury and about the country are incontestible proofs, that the Romans were here, and had a station and camp by the Avon, the work of Osterius, the Roman General under Claudius: and it is probable they lived in garrison on the Hill in the Summer, and in Winter under the Hills for a considerable extent of country.

As Julius Cæsar found Britain full of inhabitants, it is evident that they must have occupied particular places, and not less evident that they chose the most convenient. And therefore there is great reason to conclude that many of the Towns and Cities which are now most eminent, were originally begun by the native Britons. It does not appear that they had any buildings of stone or brick, or regular Towns, but irregular stations and houses, made of Hurdles. Trees and Mud. But it appears that the inhabitants of this spot, learned of the Romans to build with Stones; and to plan their Town between the Rivers. The Romans generally laid out their incipient Towns in sour Streets, directing to the four Cardinal points, which is the plan of the old and internal Town of Bristol, and still continues; also of Chester and other places of Roman foundation.

Several Authors, inform us that this place was called by the Britons, Caer Odera Nante Badon, i. e. the City Odera in Badon Valley. Leland thought that it should be read, Nante Avon, Nante signifying a place in which a River flows. As Ostorius was commander here, the Britons might have named their Town, Caer Ofter, from him, and by dropping the letter, s, not unusual among them, Caer Oter, or Odera. And to strengthen this conjecture, we may add, that Aust Passage, in Doomsday Book, was called Austre Clive, retaining the name of Ostorius without the Latin termination.

The

The origin of the present name Brislow is Caer Brito, the British Town or City; given it for distinction from the Roman station Abone as inhabited by the Britons under the protection and government of the Romans. That the Romans governed and watched over Caer Brito, may be inferred from coins of Constantine, Constantius, Gordian and Tetricus, being found at the fort by Thomas Tyndale, Esq. and from a coin of Constantine being found sour feet deep, in a field behind the Montague Tavern, in 1780. So that it is probable, they had a fort or station on the Hill, which commanded a view of the Town and a great extent of country to, and beyond Aquee Solis, the Waters of the Sun, i. e. Bath.

There is no particular information extant of any improvements, that the Romans taught or affifted the Britons to make in their Town, Brito, but that it flourished and improved we may learn from the following testimonies: Gildas, an ancient British Historian, who died in the year of Christ 570, has noticed "Brito" in his list of fortished and eminent Cities that were in Britain; in the year 430, after the Romans had lest this island, and therefore it must have been a place of some account in the fifth century. Gildas mentions 28 Cities samous in ancient times; and Nennius about the year 620, mentions Caer Brito as one of the 28. Bede who died 734, says "Britain was samous in ancient times, for 28" most noble Cities, surnished with gates and strong bolts, walls "and towers."

Theodosius was the last Roman Emperor that had power in Britain. For about 423 the Goths made dreadful devestations in the empire, and forced the Romans to leave their conquests, after they had commanded here almost 500 years. But they had levied so many Soldiers for foreign Countries, that the land was very much depopulated. So that the Britains were obliged to call in the Saxons against their enemies the Picts, and having overcome them, the Saxons made a complete conquest of the whole Country. Leland says concerning this Town. "Aucta est a Saxonibus." It was increased by the Saxons. Its name also had some little change made in it, by the addition of the Saxon termination, Stow or Place, and was for many years Brytstowe, from that Bristowe, and from the latinized nominations, Bristolia or Bristolium, modernly Bristol.

Hollingshead fays that Alfred in the fifth year of his reign drove the Danes from Exeter to Dartmouth where they took Shipping, and dispersed others, " some of whom sled to Chippenham and fome to Bristol."

About the year 900 (Leland informs us) Aylward Sneaw, a varliant Saxon Nobleman of great rank and fortune was Lord of Brightshowe. His fon Algar succeeded him; and Brightick, Brightick, Brightick, after them. This last was a very rich Man, resided much at Bristol, and greatly distinguished and improved it.

In the year 1051, in the time of Edward the Confessor, Harold and Leofwine the fons of Earl Godwin, are mentioned by our Historians to have been profcribed, and coming to Brytstowe, went on board a Ship that their brother Swayne had prepared for them and were carried to Ireland. And in 1063 (according to Florence of Worcester) Harold Duke of Kent, and afterward

King, fet fail from Brytstowe to invade Wales.

In Doomfday Book finished in the year 1086, by direction of William the Conqueror, the people of Briftol were filled Burgeffes, which proves that it was a place of some importance. " Brif-" tou with Barton, an adjoining Farm, paid to the King 110 " marks of Silver" and the Burgesses returned that Bishop G. had 33 marks and one of Gold. It was then rated higher than any City or Town in England, excepting London, York, and Winchester. Robert the rhyming Monk of Glocester reckons Bristoe, among the chief Towns of this land.

The furste Lords and maistres that yn vis londe wer And the chyffe Tounes furste they lete arer London and Everwyk, Lyncolne and Leyceftre Cochestre and Canterbyre, Bristoe and Worcestre.

The Bishop G. mentioned above, is supposed to be Godfrey Bishop of Constance, and to be the Custos or Proprietor of the Castle at that time. Camden notices, that this Town was called Brightstowe by the Saxons as being a bright and pleasant place; but it certainly existed and had the name of Brito, long before the time of the Saxons; and afterwards Brithow, and Brythowe, plainly referring to its being a principal Place or Port for the Britons, and to their former refidence in and fubfequent great connexions with it.

CHAP. III.

Select historical Notes of Bristol, with heads of Charters.

TN the year 1066, Harding the ancestor of the Berkely Family A was a magistrate, and rich merchant of Bristol. He is called Mayor and Governor of Bristol; and Leland says, that he removed the fraternity of Calendaries (a Society existing in Bristol before the Conquest) to the Church of All-Hallows, which before were at Christ-church. In 1087 the first year of the reign of William Rufus, Godfrey Bishop of Constance, Governor of Bristol Cattle, with his nephew Robert de Mowbray Earl of Northumberland. joined in Rebellion against the King; and making Bristol their head quarters, the strong fortress here became the repository of all the plunder taken round about as far as Berkely and Bath. They penetrated into Wiltshire, ravaged that county, and entering the south east quarter of Somersetshire sat down before Ilchester, but were there repulsed. After this William Rusus demolished the walls of the City.

1000. Bristol from its situation was famous for its Voyages and Trade to Ireland. The following Trade recorded in the life of Wulfstan Bishop of Worcester, in Anglia facra, shows the barbarism of those times. " There is a Town called Brickston, " opposite to Ireland, and extremely convenient for trading with " that country. Wulfilan induced them to drop a barbarous " custom, which neither the love of God nor the King could pre-" vail on them to lay aside. This was the mart for Slaves, col-" lected from all parts of England, and particularly young Wo-" men, whom they took care to provide with a pregnancy in order " to mhance their value. It was a most moving fight to see in " the public Markets, rows of young people of both Sexes, tied " together with ropes, of great beauty and in the flower of their " youth, daily profituted, daily fold. Execrable fact! Wretched " disgrace! Men unmindful of the affections of the brute creation, " delivering into flavery their Relations, and even their very " Offspring !"

In 1110 Robert Earl of Glocester was Lord of Bristol, and rebuilt part of its Castle, and fortisted it against K. Stephen whom he took and confined a Prisoner in it for the Empress Maud. This Robert married Matilda the heiress of Robert Fitzhaymon Lord or Governor of Bristolin the year 1090, and by this marriage obtained the Lordship and built the Tower in the Castle of Bristol, according to Robert of Glocester.

And Bristow throw his wyse was also hys, And he brogt to gret sta the Toune as he yut ys,

And rerde ther an castel myd the noble tour,

That of alle the tours of Engelonde ys yhelde the floure. Bristol and its Castle being in the possession of Robert Earl of Glocester and Maud the Empress, that Lady placed her Son here to School among the Sons of the chief Men of the Town, as recorded by Baker in his Chronicle. "He was brought into England" by his uncle Robert, and was put to School at Bristol, being then nine years old, and was under the tuition of one Mathews where he remained four years." Herehe grew much delighted with Robert Fitzharding, and when he came to the crown he knighted him, then Mayor or Governor of Bristol after his Father, and made him heir of the estate of Berkely.

1148 Robert Fitzharding began the foundation of the Abby of St. Augustine, and built the Church and all the Offices in fix years time.

About this time Dermot King of Lemster in Ireland, with only 60 men in his Company, sled over to Bristol, to subject himself and his Kingdom to the Crown of England. Fitzharding entertained him.

tices, Sheriffs &c. wisheth health: I grant that my men that dwell in my fee in the Marsh near the Bridge of Bristow, have their certain customs and liberties and quittances through all England and Wales, as my Burgesses, and namely those of Bristow as my Charter testifies: and I forbid that any one do them any injury or reproach upon this account." By this Charter, it appears, that there was a Bridge over the Avon in Henry the 2d's time, which in all probability was constructed of Wood.

This King further granted to his Burgesses of Bristol to be free from all Toll and other Customs throughout England, Wales and Normandy. In his time Bristol was so populous and flourishing, that he gave to it a grant of the City of Dublin in Ireland, to inhabit, possess and enjoy it, and a large Colony from Bristol was accordingly fent thither.

1190. John Earl of Morton, being Lord of Bristol, renewed its Charter, which ascertained the then boundaries of the City, confirmed the privileges of its Inhabitants and secured their Property.

marks and for the Fairs 10 marks; which shows the antiquity of the Fairs of Bristol.

1201. There was a Treasury at Bristol: and the Town paid an aid for the King's passage to Ireland, Bristol a 1000 marks and the men of Redclive a 1000 marks. The Redcliff side being perhaps as large and opulent as Bristol, might occasion the whole (as one Town) to be reckoned anciently in Somersetshire.

1209. King John issued a Proclamation at Bristol, forbidding the taking of all forts of feathered Game throughout England.

opulent Jew who refided in Bristol, named Abraham, refused to pay this Tax, for which he was fined 10,000 marks; this he also refused to pay; on which the King ordered that one of his teeth should be drawn every day till the Sum was paid: the Jew having only eight teeth, lost seven of them and then paid the money to save the last.

About this time Prince Henry, eldest Son of King John, (afterward Hen. the 3d.) was on account of the troublesome Wars in Which which his Father was engaged with the Barons, placed in Bristof, to be in safety during his minority, and to receive an Education suited to his high station, he having with him several Noblemen and Tutors for that purpose.

1215. King John, after a feries of troubles with the Barons, left his Son Henry to fucceed, who was proclaimed and crowned at Glocester. Guallo the Pope's legate, in the presence of Henry the 3d. held a Synod at Bristol, in which Louis the French King's Son, who had been invited over by the Barons was excommunicated, which strengthened the interest of the newly crowned King.

4216. The King with his Councellors and Tutors came to Briftol, and granted the Burgesses a new Charter, which enacted that Briftol should be governed by a Mayor after the manner of London, with two "grave, sad, worshipful Men" who were to be called Prepositors. The first Mayor chosen in consequence of this Charter was Adam le Page.

1240. The ground in the Marsh of St. Augustine was purchased of Abbot Bradstone for making the Trench or Canal called the Quay.

1244. King Henry granted two new Charters, which ordained that the Burgesses of Bristol should choose a Coroner, that successors should inherit the goods of deceased relatives, that the inhabitants should be as free as those of London, that the Mayor when chosen should be presented to the Constable of the Castle, &c. &c.

1247. The Mayor, Burgesses and Commonalty of Bristol, with the joint charges of the men of Redclive and the governors of Temple see, turned the course of the River Avon by cutting a Canal from Redcliss Back to Tower harratz, and built a Bridge of Stone over it. This at length had lofty houses erected on each side of it, with a Chapel across the Bridge in the centre, like a gateway. And whereas a Market had been previously held on each side of the Water, it was now ordained that all provisions should be brought to one Market, to be held at and about the High Cross at the confluence of the sour principal Streets.

1256. There was a grievous Famine in Bristol. Wheat was fold at 16s. the bushel: and good provisions were so scarce that people eat the carcafes of Dogs and other Carrion.

1263. Prince Edward was a Prisoner in the Castle of Bristol and in 1265 took Bristol Castle from the Barons and fined the Town 12000. and in 1267 the Prepositors began to be called Stewards.

1272. There were 12 Furnaces at York, and 12 at Bristol for melting Silver, and hammering and stamping Money.

1278. King Edward and Lewellin Prince of Wales were at War, in the midft of which four Ships of Briftol took a prize near to the island of Scilly; in which was the intended spouse of Lewellin and daughter of Simon Montford, which service was well accepted by the King.

1283. King Edward the 1st. came from Wales to Bristol about the middle of December, kept his Christmas here with much content and fatisfaction, and held a Parliament: and this year issued out the first regular summons by writ to the Mayor and Magistrates of Bristol, requiring that two Persons should be sent as representatives to serve in his Parliament at Shrewsbury.

1294. Simon de Bourton, Mayor, founded the Church of St. Mary Redcliff, and the Alms-house in the Long Row, in St. Thomas's Parish.

1305. K. Edward the 1st, taxing all the corporate Cities and Towns, Bristol paid $\(\frac{1}{2}\)400: and 1308. K. Edward 2d. accompanied Piers Gaveston to Bristol to bring him on his way to Ireland; and 1313 the Stewards began to be called Bailiffs.

1326. Hugh Spencer the Father, aged 90, was drawn hanged and beheaded at Briffol, in the fight of the King and his own Son Hugh: After that, his Body was hanged up for four days, and then cut in pieces, and thrown to the Dogs. Upon this the King and Hugh Spencer the younger entered a little Veffel behind the Caffie, defigning to get to Lundy or to Ireland, but having been toffed about on the Sea for a week, they landed in Wales, where the Welchmen for a reward of £2000 delivered them up to the Earl of Lancafter and his Forces. Spencer was hung at London on a gallows 50 feet high: and the King deposed and cruelly put to death in Berkely Cassle.

1345. William de Colford recorder of Bristol drew up in writing the Laws and Liberties of the Town; and the Mayor and 48 principal Citizens agreed on many ufeful Laws, which were confirmed by the Charter of the 5th. of Edward 3d. Among these it was ordered, that no leprous man stay within the Precincts of the Town nor any common woman remain within its Walls; and if such women be sound, that the doors and windows of the house should be unhung, and carried by the Serjants of the Mayor to the house of the Constable of the Ward, and there to be kept till the women be removed: that no whore should ever appear in the Streets or within the bars in St. James's without their heads covered.

1362. The Staple of Wool was established here by Edward the 3d. who also in 1373 granted a Charter, by which Brissol, for the good services the King had received from it by Sea and Land, was made a County of itself: new Boundaries, marked by Stones were set up on the Somersetshire and Glocestershire sides, for the information of posterity concerning the Liberties: the Mayor and Citizens were enabled to choose a Sherist and 40 Common Council men, who had power to make Laws and raise Taxes: and the Mayor for the future was to take his Oath before his Predecessor, and not before the Constable of the Castle.

In 1386, Bristol was grown so opulent by commerce, that when the King was threatened with a French invasion, the Citizens lent to him £200, as much as York or any City excepting London.

1409. The Commons of Somerfet, Brilfol and Wilts, prefented a petition to the King to empower them to remove all obstructions in the River Avon, that impeded the navigation between Bristol and Bath. For before the time of Richard the 1st. the Avon was navigable to Bath, and wine, wax, falt, wool, fkins and cloth, used to be conveyed in Vessels between both Cities.

A Mint for coining was established in Bristol.

1445. A great part of the lofty spire of Redcliff Church was thrown down by a violent tempest of Thunder and Lightning. The roof of the Church was beaten in and the spire never rebuilt. but both repaired and covered, as at present, by William Cannings an opulent Merchant. Also this year King Henry the 6th, visited Bristol, and renewed the Charter.

1456. Queen Margaret with her Nobility came to Briffol. 1461 Edward the fourth came to Bristol, and had Sir Baudwin Fulford, with Bright and Hessant Esqrs. beheaded.

1490. The Streets were newly paved: and the City gave the King £500 as a benevolence.

This year King Henry the 7th. with the Lord Chancellor came to Bristol and kept his court at the great house at St. Augustine's Place. The Citizens willing to show his Majesty all the respect they could during his refidence dreffed themselves in their hest clothes. The King thinking that some of their wives were too well dressed for their station, ordered that every Citizen who post feffed goods to the amount of f 20 should pay 20s. for the sumptuous apparel of his Wife.

1495. Henry the 7th. granted Letters patent to John Cabot, Merchant of Bristol, and to his three Sons Lewis, Sebastian and Sanctius for the discovery of new and unknown lands. Sebastian Cabot discovered Newfoundland in his first voyage, the island of St. John, and the continent of America, which he failed by quite to Florida.

1500. Henry the 7th granted a new Charter to the Corporation for fix Aldermen, a Recorder, two Sheriffs, forty Common Councilmen, a Chamberlain, a Seal, Water-Bailiff, and Goal delivery.

1502. King Henry gave a patent to James Elliot, and Thomas Ashurst, merchants of Bristol; and to John Gonsaler and Francis Fernandez natives of Portugal, to go with English colours in quest of unknown lands.

1534. King Henry the 8th and his train were at Thornbury, and the Mayor of Bristol fent him ten fat oxen and forty sheep :

and to Queen Ann a filver cup and cover with 100 marks of gold. One Author fays that the King came disguised to Bristol, with feveral gentlemen to Mr. Thorn's house, and seeretly viewed the City which Mr. Thorn shewed him, and being struck with the extent and appearance of the Buildings promifed to make it a Bishop's See which he afterwards did. This year there were great disputes about Laymen's preaching in Bristol, who were favored by the Mayor, and some Priests sent to Newgate; and 1538 George Wifard a heretic preached in St. Nicholas Church, and was ordered to bear a faggot for his erroneous doctrine.

1541. King Henry the 8th having suppressed the Monastery of St. Augustine, erected it into a Bishop's See, and constituted Paul Bush, rector of Winterbourne, its first Bishop. Bristol was now by Proclamation declared a City.

The Earl of Pembroke came from Wales to Bristol to review the trained Bands, and he having taken the upper hand of the Mayor, and notice of it being given to the Queen, she sent for him by post to Court, and he was committed to the Tower and fined. 1588. Four Ships were fitted out from Bristol, to join the Queen's Fleet at Plymouth against the Spanish Armada.

1597. There was fuch a fearcity of provisions at Bristol, that persons of Ability were obliged to keep as many poor people in their houses as their incomes would admit, for sear of an insurrection. Wheat 20s. a bushel.

1609. John Guy of Bristol having settled a colony in Newfoundland, returned, leaving his Son there, and in 1611, went back again taking with him a Minister, and several Men and Women.

1613. Queen Ann came to Briftol, and was presented by the Mayor, with a rich embroidered purse of gold; and attended in a grand procession to her lodgings at Sir John Young's at the great house in Sr. Augustine's Place, (now Colston's School) where the Was was faluted with 42 great guns. On Sunday the went to the Cathedral: and on Monday at high tide, a Sea fight was exhibited on the River for her entertainment, and on Tuesday she went to Bath. She was so pleased with her reception here, that she gave the Mayor a golden ring set with diamonds worth £60. saying that "she never knew she was a Queen till she came to Bristol."

1635. Bristol paid above £25,000 for Customs: and gave £2163. 13s. 4d. towards fitting out a Fleet against France and Holland.

1638. Bristol felt the ill effects of the tyrannical Government. Commissioners and Pursuivants were sent down, who examined on oath, Merchants, what entries were made at the Custom-house, what commodities they had fent to Sea; what Foreign goods imported for years past? &c. In consequence of these examinations, fome were compelled to accuse each other; and were sent for up to London. Shopkeepers had heavy imposts laid on them. Soapmakers paid £4 Custom per ton for Soap. Brewers forty marks per annum for a Commission; these grievances soured the people against the King and Government. Four Aldermen &c. went to complain to the King, who told them with outward civility, that he was forry for fuch hard commissions, which however he could not recall. They went to great expence about a trial, but could get no determination in their favor. This year a Ship was launched at the end of the Quay, in which eleven Boys were drowned, and from thence she was called the Drown-boy.

1641, War commenced between the King and Parliament. Denzil Hollis was nominated to command the Militia at Bristol.

He subscribed (1000 against the King.

1642. The Castle and Walls of Bristol were repaired; a fort made at Brandon, and another at St. Michael's-hill, now the Royal Fort. Two regiments under Col. Essex were by the contrivance of the Mayor's wife and two other Ladies let into the City. The Parliament made a weekly assessment on all Cities and Counties. Bristol paid £55, 151, per week.

1643. Col. Fiennes Governor of Bristol, discovered a design of Robert Yeomans and George Bouchier to deliver up the City to the King's Forces; upon which they were condemned by a Council of War, and hanged May 30th, notwithstanding the King's letter to the Mayor and Citizens on their behalf.

4th July Prince Rupert sat down before Bristol, and notwithfranding two Citizens had been hanged for intending to deliver up the City the design took effect, for it being at that time unprepared for resistance, (of which P. Rupert had notice from his Correspondents within) the Governor was obliged after three days stegg to surrender it to him: and on the 2d of August King Charles came to Bristol, and on Sunday attended Divine Service at the Cathedral Church.

1645. The Plague raged in this City, and about 3000 died. Fairfax fummoned P. Rupert to deliver up the City to the Parliament, which at length he did. There were found here 140 pieces of Cannon mounted; 100 barrels of Powder; Victuals in the Royal Fort for 150 men for 320 days; the Castle victualled for half so long; the Prince had in garrison 2500 Foot, 100 Horse, besides 1000 trained Bands and Auxiliaries, so that the taking of this Place was a great loss to the King and of great importance to the Parliament.

1648. King Charles having been tried and condemned at West-minster was executed there, and the Mayor of Bristol, proclaimed that there was no King in England, and that the successor of Charles the 1st. were Traitors to the State. 1650. The Parliament cruelly and unjustly passed sentence on Nailor to stand in the Pillory two hours; and then to be whipped by the common Hangman, his Tongue to be bored through with a hot Iron, and his Forehead to be marked with the letter B: and after to be sent to Bristol to be there publicly whipped.

1657, Dec. 8. The Corporation received a letter from the Lord Protector, a copy of which may not be unacceptable to our readers.

Oliver. P.

Trustie and well beloved, we greete you well: remembering well the late expressions of love that I have had from you, I cannot omit any opportunitie to expresse my care of you. But our intelligence on all hands being, that they have a design upon your Cittie, we could not but warne you thereof, and give you authoritie, as we doe hereby, to put yourselves into the best posture you can for your own defence.

To our trustie and well beloved, the Mayor Aldermen and Common Council of the Cittie of Bristowe.

In pursuance of this command, the Militia was raised and the City was put into a posture of defence.

1660. The King was reftored. 1663, 5th of September, the King and Queen, with James Duke of York and his Dutchefs, Prince Rupert &c. came to Briftol, and were splendidly received and entertained by the Mayor at a dinner provided on the occation. 150 pieces of ordnance were discharged in the Marsh, (now Queen's-square) at three distinct times. The King knighted the Mayor, Sir John Knight, and the Royal Family went to Bath at about four o'Clock.

A Town Clerk to be chosen, a Barrister of three years, a Steward of the Sheriffs Court and two Coroners, Mayor &c. to have the regulation of Markets and Fairs, and to hold Piedpowder Court, &c.

1685. There was a great alarm of the Duke of Monmouth's coming here from Taunton and Wells. In confequence of this, the Duke of Beaufort, Lord Lieutenant of the City, drew up 21 companies of Foot in Redcliff-meads. The Duke of Monmouth was certainly on his march towards Bristol, abounding in Money, Arms, Stores, and in Friends to him, so that he intended to attempt its capture, being assured of assistance within: but the Duke of Beaufort having declared to the Citizens that he would fet fire to the Town if they made an infurrection, Monmouth faid "God" forbid that I should bring the two calamities of Fire and Sword together, on so noble a City," so he marched to Bath, Froome, and Bridgewater; where from the top of the Tower, perceiving Lord Feversham's Horse and Foot lying at King's Sedgmore, carelessly encamped, he determined to attack them in the night, but was defeated, and taken afterwards, near Ringwood in Dorfetshire, lying in a Ditch, covered with Fern, in the habit of a Peasant: he had some green pease in his pocket (on which he had subsisted) with his George of Diamonds. Having not slept for three nights from exhaustion of spirits, he fainted and wept. He was tried and condemned to be beheaded the 15th of July, then 30 years old.

Judge Jefferies came to Bristol, and opened his commission with a long speech full of asperity against the Citizens, accusing the Mayor &c. of pride, and of kidnapping away and selling abroad to his advantage, fellows that had been brought before him for small crimes, and making them compound to be transported. Jefferies condemned six persons here for High Treason; three were reprieved.

James for displacing the Protestant Corporation, and for putting Papists in their stead, which was accordingly done. And in April the declaration was brought hither for indulgence of all persons in the free and public exercise of their Religion, and in creeting Meeting Houses: for which some Dissenters presented addresses of thanks; all availed themselves of the Liberty, to which they had a right, but most parties suspected that the King intended under this mask to introduce Popery. Nor did this appearance of moderation, nor his order for restoring displaced Corporations avail, for many Bishops and considerable Men adhered to the Prince of Orange, and Military Officers deserted to him.

1688. The displaced Corporation was restored by the King's Proclamation, which concluded with his intention of calling a Parliament, but all were too late: for on the 5th of November the Prince of Orange landed at Torbay: and on the 15th of February 1689, he and the Princess were proclaimed King and Queen in Briftol.

1690. King William landed from Ireland, opposite Pill, near Shirehampton, (now Lamplighters-hall) and went to Sir Robert illumination, and burning an effigy of the Pope.

1703. A great florm of Wind and Rain, that drowned all the low fields and country about Briftol, down to Kingroad; and filled many Cellars and Warehouses in Briftol. Boats were sent from hence to save the lives of people who had taken resuge on Trees and Bushes.

1704. The number of Ale-houses here were limited to 220. Stage-plays were prohibited within the Liberties: and the Theatre in Tucker (now Bath) Street, was converted into a Presbyterian.

Meeting-house.

1708. Queen's Square was laid out and the Buildings were begun. A fearcity and exportation of Corn, occasioned an infurrection of the Colliers which was suppressed by reducing the price of Wheat to 6s. 8d. a bufhel.

1709. The prefent Custom-house was built by the Corporation,

The old House is yet standing on the Back.

Queen Ann having vifited Briffol, renewed its Charter, confirming all other Charters and Liberties, and afcertaining its Boundaries. This Charter ordains that Brittol remain for ever a City incorporate and County of itself; and that its Magistrates hold Government over all its Boundaries by Land and Water: that the firm of the Body Corporate be, the Mayor, Burgesses and Commonalty of the City of Bristol: that the Mayor be chosen every 15th day of September: that the Recorder shall be the first Alderman; with the others making twelve, according to the number of Wards; that two Sheriffs be chosen annually out of the Common Council; which are to confift of forty-two Persons besides the Mayor: that the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council shall have power to make and execute Laws for the good of the City, and to fine and punish, not contrary to the Laws and Statutes of the Kingdom: that every Recorder shall be a Barrister of five years standing: that the Town Clerk and Steward of the Sheriff's Court be Barristers of three years: that the Mayor, Recorder and Aldermen be all Justices of the Peace for City and County: and shall try all Treasons, Felonies, capital and criminal Causes: have Power to hold four Sessions of the Peace in every year; to change the Times and Places of any of the Markets, and to regulate them by reasonable and wholesome Laws of their own making, for the benefit of the Perfons reforting to them: and finally that the Mayor, Burgesses and Commonalty of the City of Bristol, and their fuccessors, shall have and enjoy all jurisdictions, Liberties, Powers, franchifes, exemptions, priviliges, emoluments and hereditaments heriditaments that were enjoyed by their ancestors, or that any Kings and Queens of England have heretofore made, granted, or confirmed. These are the principal heads of this Charter, which may serve to result the vulgar error that Bristol has none, and that its Magistrates are self created. Many Acts of Parliament have been obtained fince this, for watching, lighting and paving; maintainance of the Poor; building Bristol Bridge and widening avenues to it; for building and rebuilding several Churches; for a Floating-dock and extending the Boundaries of the City; for regulating the Police, Hackney Coaches, and many other necessary and useful purposes.

Queen Ann was the last Monarch who publicly visited Bristol, and who granted it the principal and last grand Charter for its good Government and Peace. She was a pious, benevolent, and truly amiable Woman; and an elegant pedestrian Statue of her erected in one of the Squares of Bristol might serve to perpetuate the memory of her private virtues and public benefits.

1711. An Act of Parliament was procured to complete the navigation of the Avon to Bath, which was completed 1727 when the first barge went from Bristol to Bath laden with deals, lead and meal.

great number, cut down and entirely destroyed them. .

Mr. Packer, Ship-builder, had his house burned down in consequence, which occasioned an alarm and double watch till-6 in the morning.

1733. The great Crane at the Gibb, built by the ingenious Mr. Padmore: and the Mud Dock completed at the expence of the Merchants.

1736. The Statue of King William erected in Queen's-Square.
1738. Frederick Prince of Wales and the Prince's Augusta his Lady, came from Bath to Bristol. They were met by the Mayor &c. at Temple Gate, where the Recorder delivered a Speech to them. A large Procession of Citizens preceded their Coach up High-street and along the Quay, to Mr. Combes's house in Queen's Iquare, where an elegant dinner was provided and a Ball at night. They lay at Mr. Coombes's that night and returned the next morning to Bath. The City Library in King-street, built at the expense of the Chamber, and cost £1600. was finished this year.

1740. The foundation of the Exchange was laid.

1745. The Pretender's Son having advanced as far as Derby, the Citizens met at the Merchant's-hall, and subscribed £36,450 for raising men. The TrialPrivateer took a Ship bound to Scotland, with fire-locks, warlike stores, £6000 in money, and a number of men, and brought her into Kingroad. Also two London Privateers landed here the Money and Stores taken in two rich Spanish prizes, which were deposited in the Custom-house, amounting to about £800,000, and were conveyed to London in 22 waggons, guarded by Soldiers.

1746. It is remarkable, that at this time William Cann Eq. Town-clerk, John Mitchell Deputy Town-clerk; and James Britton the under clerk were all mad: the former cut his throat, and the other two were fent to the receptacle for infane persons at the Fishponds.

1748. The Sheds on the Back for the Corn-Market were finished. 1750. An earthquake in London, and felt also here. Two Ships arrived with two Whales at Sea-mill Dock. This trade not answering, has not been fince revived; and the Dock left to ruin. The Bill for naturalization of Foreign Protestants was opposed by the Citizens of Bristol.

1752. Brittol was invaded by a riotous and formidable mob of Colliers and country people from Kingswood and adjacent Parts, on account of the scarcity of Corn. They broke the windows of the Council-house, and Exchange; plundered a Corn Ship, and occasioned a general stoppage of Trade, and all the Shops to be shut up. The Citizens armed and were headed by the Mayor. The Colliers resulted and kept up their riot and invasion for a whole week. Many were wounded and some killed, before they were quelled and dispersed. Others were taken prisoners, tried, and suffered by fine and imprisonment.

71753. The Bill to naturalize Jews was strongly opposed in this City; and Dr. Tucker (the now worthy Dean of Glocester) was burned in effigy for patronizing the Jews. 1754. St Giles's brought into Bristol.

Bridge at the head of the Quay was finished:

1760. The Act passed for taking down the old Bridge which was incumbered with lofty houses; a temporary Bridge began to be built on Piers of Stone, above the old one; and in 1761, the Duke of York made a public entry over it into Bristol, and remained here some days; and this year the old Bridge was taken down.

1764. A Mrs. Ruscombe and her servant were found shockingly cut and murdered in her house in College-green, and the perpetrator was never discovered. This year, the Floating-dock was begun by Mr. Champion. 1765. Bridewell-bridge was built of stone, before of wood. The new Theatre in King-Atreet was opened. An Act passed to take down all signs, posts and 1766. Castle gate was taken down, and removed by a spouts. CHAP. IV.

Of the Walls, Gates, and Caftle of Briftol.

A UTHORITIES have been already adduced to prove, that the ancient Town or City, confifting principally of four Streets, was inclosed and defended by Walls and Gates. The Gates were latterly known by the names of St. Leonard, St. Nicholas, Newgate, Tower-Gate, St. Johns, St. Giles's, fix in all, of which only two, St. Johns and Tower-lane Gate are remaining in the oldest and original Wall. The Town being enlarged by the Saxons, another and external Wall and Gates became necessary for defence, which probably were Lawfords-Gate, Pithay-Gate, Needless-Gate, Froom-Gate, Marsh-Gate, Back-street Gate and the Back-Gate. We find that Briftol had a double Wall before William Rufus difmantled it; and there is little reason to doubt that the outer Wall built to protect the Suburbs which the increase of inhabitants had occasioned, was the second and last Wall, as we have not any account of another, on this fide of the Water. The Redchiff fide was defended by a Wall at an early period which had two Gates, Temple and Redcliff. On this fide, fome parts of the old Wall remain fortwo or three furlongs in length, having the battlements filled up. A very ancient round Tower is fill flanding on the outer Wall near the River Froom, and may be viewed from the hinder parts of fome of the houses on St. James's-Back. After the demolition of the Castle, two Gates were built for the inclosure of its Precincts, Castle-Gate and Queen's-Gate, so that Bristol had in all seventeen Gates; three only of which remain, the two before mentioned and Temple-Gate. The increase of the Town, which made a fecond Wall necessary, being in the time of the Saxons; we have sufficient reason to conclude, that it was about the year 930, in the reign of Ethelstan: and also that the Wall was begun by Aylward Sneaw (or Snow) if not finished by him. For the Pithay-Gate was formerly called Aylwards Gate and the Bridge under it Aylwards Bridge: and fo lately as the year 1486, William of Worcester in his memoirs of Bristol, called the Pithay, Aylward-street, and the Gate Aylwards-Gate. fee page 184. When the Caltle-Gate was taken away its materials were erected on a smaller scale at a Gentleman's Seat near the road to Briflington.

Temple-Gate is a lofty and elegant arch of Freestone with two posterns for foot passengers, rebuilt in 1734. Over the Gate there are under a pediment, the Arms of the City towards the Country:

and of the King towards the City.

St. John's-Gate is the northern Gate of the old Town, and has on the fouthern fide, statues of the Kings Belinus and Brennus, the latter of whom was the reputed founder of Bristol, if we are disposed to credit the sables of Geoffrey of Monmouth and old monkish traditions. A late Author has afferted that "the statues appear to be as ancient as the Town itself;" but the Gate, (which is a handsome gothic arch) the Tower and Spire upon it and the adjoining Parish Church, were built anew in the 14th century, by Walter Frampton, three times Mayor, and an opulent merchant of Bristol.

Tower-Gate in Tower-lane, which must be very ancient, is a plain arch in the thick Wall of the City; has a house built upon it, and now, steps of stone under it, to help the declivity and for foot pasfengers only.

Camden was certainly erroneous in afferting that Robert Rufus Earl of Glocester, natural Son of Henry the 1st. was the sounder of the Castle of Bristol, for in 1088 it was mentioned by Roger Hoveden as "Castrum fortissimum" a very strong Castle. And if it were so strong only one year after the Conquest, there cannot be a question concerning its previous existence as a fortress to defend the City. According to Stow, in the year 915, a great Navy of Danes sailed about the West country and landed in divers places, taking great plunder; and Edward senior, Son of Alfred, for strengthening the Country, made a Castle at the mouth of the Avon-Barrett laboured hardly to prove this Edward to be the founder of the Caffle at Briffol, (which by no means follows from Stow) and for want of other evidence he had recourse to the literary forgeries of Chatterton, to the pseudo-Rowley, and the fictitious Turgot. However, though Earl Robert was not the founder yet he repaired and rebuilt some parts of it, greatly added to its strength, erected a Palace and other houses in it, and a magnificent Tower scarcely to be equalled in England, and encompassed the whole with strong Walls, devoting every tenth stone to the building of the Priory of St. James, in whichhe was buried 1147. The Castle was certainly held in 1088 against William Rufus, by the Bishop of Constance, before Henry the 1st, father of the Earl was at man's estate. Leland fays, that Robert built part of it, and that "the great dungeon Towre was made of stone brought out of Normandie by the redde Earl of Glocestre" William Rufus, for fervice done to him by Robert Fitzhaymon gentleman of his Bedchamber, gave him the Earldom of Glocester, with the Castle of Bristol appendant to it: he had no Son, but four daughters: Mabile the eldest was a great Heirefs, and a lofty dame. This Lady, King Henry 1st. married to his fon Robert, who in 1110 was Lord of Bristol by his marriage and creation; Fitzhaymon dying in 1107. Robert, monk of Glocester gives a curious' account of King Henry's courting the Lady for his Son, who refused him, at first, for want of a Title.

Sir, theo faide, ich wote your herte upon mee is,
More for myne heritage, than for myfelfe I wis:
And fuch heritage as ich have, hit weer to mee greet shame,
To take a Lorde, but he hadde any surname:
Damoseill, quoth the Kyng, thou seest well in this case
Sir Robert Fitz Hayme thi Fader's name was:
As fayre a name he shall have, as you may see,
Sir Robert le Fitz Roy shall his name be:
Damoseill, he say'd, thi Lorde shall have a name
For him and for his heires sayre without blame;
For Robert Erle of Gloucester, his name shall be and is,
Hee shall be Erle of Gloucester, and his heires I wis:
Innethis forme, quoth shee, ich wole, that all my thyng be his.

As feveral Authors inform us that William Rufus razed the double Walls of Briftol, it is very probable that this Earl, who newly inclosed the Castle, did also repair or rebuild the Walls of the City, which stood entire for ages after.

In the Battle of Lincoln, King Stephen was taken Prifoner by Earl Robert, who fent him to the Empress Maud then at Glocester, from whence she ordered the King to Bristol Castle, where he was at first treated gently, but afterward laid in Irons, on pretence of having been seen beyond the hounds of his consinement. The Earl himself was also taken Prisoner near Winchester, and was esteemed an equal ransom for the King, who was released, after nine months imprisonment, 1141. The King, for his greater dignity was released first, and the Queen of Stephen, with one of her Sons, and two Lords were kept in the Castle of Bristol, as hostages, from the time of the King's being released, till the Earl was also returned to his Friends at Bristol, when he set the Queen and hostages free.

It was not until 1130, that Earl Robert began to rebuild, improve, and strengthen this ancient Castle, celebrated by Roger of Hoveden, 142 years before. A most strong Castle could not be the work of a day; it was certainly of very ancient foundation. The Anglo-Saxon Kings, and Earls of Glocester, the Lords of this country, long held this City under their protection and government, and received great advantages from its rents and profits. These might either have built, or improved the Castle, if previously built. Aylward Sneaw, who was Lord of Bristol about the year 900, and said to be vir in armis strenuus, a man of great prowes; or Bristric his grandson, who were both very partial to Bristol, and great builders and repairers of it, might have commenced or improved so considerable a work. An incontestible proof, that Bristric carried on capital operations at Bristol may be found in some Latin verses, taken from a Chronicle of Tewksbury, quoted by Dugdale, in Monasticon Vol. 1. page 161.

Atque ego Brictanus, ultimus ante conquestum Dominus, Hoc Templum fundo, mihimet vere corde jucundo, Bristow construxi, Honor fiat ut Crucifixi.

Thus translated:

I Briceric, ere the Conquest, the last Lord, This Temple founded: with heart's free accord, Library canto

I built up Bristow, for this very cause, To honor him who dy'd upon the Cross.

This Temple refers to the great old Church at Tewksbury, one of the largest in England that is not a Cathedral: and the last line, either to the general worship of Christ, or to some particular religious foundation erected by Brictric; or to the sour most ancient Streets of Bristol, which were built in the sorm of a Cross.

An embattled Wall was the first outwork of desence round the City; till, at the Eastern part, where it was not moted by the River, the Castle was erected for its protection. Then were the two communications made between the Avon and Froome to the East and West; that to the East is still remaining, the partly arched, and that to the West now destroyed, was a very deep trench from the water below Newgate, to Avon: over the middle of this, near to St. Peter's church, was a Drawbridge leading from the Castlegate to the Town. The circumference of the water around it was at least half a mile, according to William of Worcester 1225 yards. It had very strong Walls, with battlements, and a Sally-port leading into the scite of the present Queen-street. To describe the various works and buildings of the Castle would be to little purpose. Concerning the great Tower we shall just quote from the last cited Author. " The tour called the dongeon, ys in length " Este and West 60 feet, and North and South 45 feet; with " fowre toures standyng upon the four corners: the myghtyest " tour above all the fowre toures ys 5 fethym hygh abofe all the " fowre toures : and the Wallys be in thykness there 6 fote."

The Castle itself excluding the outworks, was 540 feet from East to West, and 300 feet from North to South. There were, in the two great courts of the Castle, many Towers, a Church, and a magnificent Chapel for the King; a Palace, a Royal Hall, 36 vards long and 18 broad; a Prince's Chamber, 17 yards by o. The principal buildings flood on an area of three acres and three quarters of ground, exclusive of houses, barracks, gardens, courts, yards, and other acommodations for the Officers and Garrison. Leland informs us, that the great Tower, stood in the north west part of the Castle, and that in his time, about the 26th of Henry the 8th the whole was decaying and tending to ruin. There are very few remains of the Castle now extant. On the Eastern side. in Tower-street, near Castle-street, leading to the green, are two Saxon arches, withanarched roof in a room, having the appearance of a Church or Chapel, but are now the house and shop of a respective to medical feet

Cooper.

In the Reign of King Stephen, the Robbers and Freebooters of the Castle, both horse and foot, committed great depredations on the City and Country: For the Castle was exempt from the jurifdiction of the City and its Officers, and under its own Governors, who might fometimes be absent, or connive at the insults of the Military. In the reign of King John, the Castle was annexed to the Crown; and from henceforth, the Kings of England referved it to their own use, choosing the Constable and other Officers, and appointing them falaries and perquifites. Our limits will not permit us to particularize all that refers to the history of the Castle or The reader will find fome Notes concerning the Castle in the historical part. And to these we shall add, that at the Reformation, in 1549, the inhabitants of the West country and of Bristol being tumultuous, the Castle and Walls were repaired, fortified and mounted with cannon; and guard kept day and night to prevent any furprize or infurrection. Our erroneous ancestors, resembling their erroneous successors, held as sacred, superstition and abfurdity; and deemed Reformation to be Innovation. From 1545 to 1553, a Printing Press was set up, and a Mint established in the Castle; and the Church plate, seized at the dissolution o. Monasteries, was coined there.

In 1602 a Petition was presented to the Privy Council, from the Mayor &c. complaining that the Governor being absent from the Castle, and leaving an unworthy Deputy, about 240 persons were suffered to inhabit the Castle, who were of lewd life and conversation, and subsisted by begging and sealing; and that the Castle was a sanctuary, refuge and receptacle of Malesactors, who slew thither to escape justice. In consequence of this, the Governor was ordered to remove such persons, and to admit none but of good behaviour, that the City be not further molested.

The Castle continued to be part of the county of Glocester for 256 years after Bristol had been made a county of itself: But the old complaints being revived, of its affording an affylum to thieves, malefactors and disorderly persons, and of its being out of the jurisdiction of Bristol; and also, that no Justice of Peace belonging to the county, resided in or near it; In the year 1629, King Charles the 1st. at the request of the Mayor and Citizens, by a Charter, entirely seperated it from the county of Glocester, and made it part of the City of Bristol. And in 1631, the Castle with all its buildings and appendages were sold for ever, by the said King, to the Mayor and Burgesses of Bristol, for the sum of £959 paid into the Exchequer at Westminster.

In the beginning of the War between the King and Parliament the Castle was repaired, and garrisoned by the Parliament's army, under Col. Nath. Fiennes made Governor. This was a place of great importance, as it awed all the Western counties and had accommodations for a large army. King Charles therefore was desirous to have it in his possession. The plot of Yeamans and Bouchier to deliver it up, not succeeding, Prince Rupert besieged it; and seeing the improbability of taking the City and Castle by blockade, refolved to form it, which he did in fix different places, fo effectually that the befieged, being unable any longer to refift, capitulated. This capture was dearly purchased; the King lost many of his most valuable Officers and 500 of his best troops at the siege: however he was so well satisfied, that he ordered a Public Thankfgiving on the occasion: and when he came to Bristol on the 3d of August following with Prince Charles, the Duke of York, and feveral of the Nobility; the King lodged at the house of Alderman Creswick, in Small-street, and the Prince and Duke at Alderman Holworthy's, directly opposite.

After the King's defeat at the battle of Nafeby, Prince Rupert repaired to Bristol, which he found so well supplied with men, provisions and ammunition, that he wrote to the King, assuring him that he could sustain a four months siege. From the character of the Prince, great expectations were formed, and most people concluded that he would have made a vigorous defence; but to the altonishment of the King and his Friends, when Sir Thomas Fairfax undertook the siege, the Prince capitulated and gave up the place, the 11th of Sept. 1645. The King was so vexed at this loss, and the trilling efforts made by the Prince to preserve the City, that he revoked all his commissions, and wrote to him to quit the kingdom immediately.

The two last constables of this Castle, were Major Gen. Skippon, and Mr. Adrian Scroop. The former was the person commissioned by the Parliament to carry £200,000 to the Scots, to obtain the surrender of King Charles, which was effected in the year 1646: and the latter was executed at Charing-cross, after the restoration, for being one of the High Court of Justice, who sentenced Charles ift. to death.

After Oliver Cromwell was proclaimed Protector, he fent orders for the demolition of the Castle of Bristol, which was begun in January 1655, and the whole was razed to the ground, scarcely any vestives of it being now remaining. In 1656, a road and preparations for a street, to the Old-market were made through the Castle; before this, the common road was through Newgate and the Broad Wear, to the county of Glocester. Castle-gate was erected in 1659, and removed in 1766. Thus was this Forters, which had been deemed impregnable in former ages, (before the invention of Gunpowder,) which has made such distinguished figure in history, and been the subject of so much contention, totally destroyed, after having stood at least six hundred years. It was soon built into Streets and Lanes, the principal of which are Castle-street, Castle-green, and Tower-street, now reckoned in the heart of the City, and constituting one of its principal Wards.

King Charles the 2d, after the battle of Worcester, in his several journies to conceal himself from his pursuers by the assistance of his friends, once passed through the City, on horseback, in disguise, dress like a country man riding before Mrs. Lane, towards the great Manor-house still remaining at Abbot's Leigh, near Bristol, where he lay concealed for some time, and used to turn the spit in the kitchen to prevent discovery: the block on which he sat is preserved there to this day. In passing through the City, he could not resist an inclination of turning a little out of his way to take a view of the Castle, that had been the scene of so many interesting

Near to Bridewell-bridge, which was formerly called Monk'sbridge, there was a place of great strength, fortified with bulwarks and a Tower; but I have not reckoned this among the City gates, because it appears not to have been a principal avenue, but only a fmall postern; for until the year 1765, the Bridge was merely a little narrow slip, or gallery of wood, which was then taken away, and the present Bridge of Stone built, and that only for foot passengers. The two gates that now inclose the fronts of Bridewell, and which were erected in 1721, are modern monuments of the ancient building.

History of the progressive augmentation of the ancient City. Account of its late, and present increase; its extent, circumference; number of houses and inhabitants.

DRISTOL was but small in its original foundation, the first D Wall not measuring a mile round; but a place and port so happily fituated foon began to extend its ancient boundaries. The conflux of inhabitants occasioned by its early Trade, and its increafing Population, rendered the narrow confines of its original Wall incapable of containing its numerous inhabitants, who began to erect buildings beyond it, both on the Glocester and Redcliff fide of the River, The suburbs on the Glocestershire side, soon made a fecond and external Wall necessary, long before the Conquest; the extent and gates of which we have already noticed. The plan for building, on the Redcliff fide, was more spacious than that of the old Town; and as buildings and inhabitants increased there, Walls and Gates became as necessary as on the other side: andit was very anciently thus defended, long before the first bridge, which was of wood, was built across the Avon. The large and strong Castle, with its outworks, when completed, as it joined closely to the old Town, made the circumference of both together, a mile and a half. The accession of the monastery of St. Augustine, and the Gaunt's Church and Hospital, to the West, and the priory of St. James to the N. W. produced an increase of buildings and inhabitants in these agreeable situations. Testimonies are not wanting to prove, that the Trade of Briftol at those times was so confiderable as to effectuate a rapid progress of its buildings and extent. Andrew de Chesne, thus describes it as in the time of King Stephen. " Est Bristoa civitas omnium fere regionis civitatum " opulentissima &c." i. e. " Bristow is the richest City almost of " all the Cities of this Country, receiving Merchandize from " neighbouring and foreign places, with the Ships under fail." Lord Littleton, in his life of Henry 2d. vol. 2, p. 177, quotes William of Malmsbury's authority "that Bristol was then full of " Ships from Ireland, Norway, and every part of Europe, which " brought hither great Commerce and much foreign Wealth."

And if it were a place of fuch Trade fo early, we may be affured that the buildings of the City were numerous and flourishing; and that the inhabitants were fo too, we need no other proofs than the number of handsome Churches (nine at least) that were crouded within the small compass of the Walls of the most ancient City. . The enterprizes of making a new Key or Haven, and of stoppipg up the former course of the Froome; the building a new bridge of from over the Avon, (1247,) the incorporation of Redcliff with Bristol in Government, Markets and Privileges, were attended with very beneficial confequences to this whole community and made it to flourish exceedingly. The suburbs of Bristol increased greatly to the North and East. That spacious street the Old-market, and adjacent buildings, the large and very. ancient parish church of St. Philip and Jacob, shew its early elongation to the East. The fields and grounds under the Walls to the N. and N. E. were regularly laid out and partly built four hundred years ago. William of Worcester (1486) mentions Broad-mead, Marthall-street, (now Merchant-street,) St. James'sback and the Barrs, (now Barrs-lane) then inhabited by common Women.

On account of this last increase, the church of the priory of St. James was made parochial in 1374; and the Parishoners were bound by indenture to build a Tower or Belfry of stone at their own expence; and the bells were to be at the joint expence of the Priory and Parishoners. The unfailing growth of Trade and foreign Commerce: the Charters and Priviliges granted by various Monarchs, which have been already particularized. The dignity of City and Bishoprick granted by Henry the 8th; the purchase, and addition of the Castle to the City, and building it into streets; have all contributed to the extent, opulence and eminence of Bristol, down towards the close of the last century.

Since that time, all the buildings in City or Suburbs which have a modern appearance have been erected. In the reign of William the 3d, the Marsh was laid out for building; and in due time the spacious Square called Queen's, and Princes-street, were finished and inhabited. The names of Ann-street, George's and Eugene freets, leave no doubt of the times in which that large and populous suburb to the East was planned and built. Marlborough, Eugene and Earl-streets, in St. James's, give similar information. St. James's square, and the best houses in College-green; and the adjacent fireets, Trinity, Orchard, Denmark and Hanover-fireets, with numerous other streets and places of modern structure soon followed the former. But the chief enlargement of this City and the Hotwelis, has been within memory, by the addition of so many handsome Breets and elegant buildings on every side, that the whole whole Town is at present a fourth part more extensive than it was forty years ago: and the industrious inhabitants have so improved their situation, that after London, Bristol justly challenges the first place in the catalogue of English Cities.

The boundaries of Briftol, on the Glocestershire side include four miles and a half and 37 perches: and on the Somerfet fide, two miles and a half and 18 perches: so that the City is seven miles and 55 perches in circumference. By a late act of Parliament (1777) the liberties on the Glocestershire side, are extended to Rownham-passage or ferry, about a quarter of a mile from the Hotwell-house. The boundaries in some places extend beyond the buildings; and in others, the buildings extend greatly beyond the boundaries; and it would be therefore difficult to afcertain the dimensions of the City itself, which is nearly of a circular form, with very large suburbs, especially to the East and West. according to our first proposal, (and our engraved Plan) to understand by Bristol, the City and its connected suburbs, we shall give our readers the following exact and definitive account of its length and breadth. From the top of Lawrence-hill East, to St. Peter's-pump, one mile; from thence to Limekiln-dock two; and to the Hotwell-house, West, three full miles, half the length of London and Westminster. The breadth of the City and fuburbs from North to South is as follows. From Stokes-croft Turnpike, over Bristol-bridge, to Thomas-lane, Redcliff-street, is one mile; from thence to the Mayor's-paddock, at the bottom of Redcliff-hill, a mile and a half; and through Redcliff-highway Bedminster, and to the end of the buildings in the Bridgwater road, or to Ashton Turnpike, upwards of two miles and a half,

In the year 1757, the whole of the City and suburbs was faid to contain 13,000 houses and 90,000 souls. Anderson in his chronological history of Commerce, fays, that " in the year 1758, he " perambulated the City for two fuccessive days, and from a near " examination of the number of houses on new foundations, and " freets erected fince 1751, he cannot but think it contains not ef lefs than 100,000 fouls, and is as large as the City of London." Though the numbers might not at that time, be quite fo high as here rated, yet Briftol is certainly avery populous City, and on public occasions such as executions, elections &c. exhibits vaft, incredible, and almost endless crowds of people. Since the year 1758, the increase of houses has been without intermission. And now, (1793) there are many hundreds of handsome houses building on new foundations, in and about Bristol, Clifton and the Hotwells. To the east of St. James's parish, a kind of new & elegant Town is almost completed: a beautiful square, with a Church and lofty Steeple on the easternfide, and several streets branching from

'he square in various directions; some of which are inhabited. The builders have exceeded the bounds of St. James's and St. Michael's parishes to the N. W. and have erected streets and a new Chapel in the parish of Westbury. The buildings on Brandon-hill westward, and by the road from the new square (Berkely) to Clifton are numerous. And there are fo many capital and spacious piles of new houses in Clifton parish, that it bids fair to be equal to a City. It is now in contemplation to build another Church, and to establish a Market in this elevated and healthy fituation. The fuburbs and environs of Bristol are very populous; particularly towards the East and the collieries in Kingswood, where the houses are so thick as to appear to be rather a continuation of the City or suburbs, than part of the country. So that if, in our computation of people at Bristol we include its environs (as at London are included the villages and people within the bills of Mortality) viz. the out-parish of St. Philip and Jacob, Barton-hill, Upper and Lower-Easton, Baptist-mills, St. George's-parish, the out-parish of St. James, and the new buildings in the parish of Westbury; the parishes of St. John Bedminster, and Clifton, and the Town of the Hotwells, all of which pertain to the City, or are in the vicinity of the suburbs, we may find the whole to contain upwards of 100,000 fouls.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Rivers, Keys, Navigation, Docks and Bridges of Briftol.

HE River Avon, the inferior in breadth to the Thames, is one of the most notable, useful, and curious Rivers in England. As the Thames hath on its banks the two finest cities of the East, London and Oxford, fo the Avon hath on hers, the two best and largest cities of the West; Bristol, the capital Key and great Mart of this country, and Bath, the most elegant City in the Kingdom, without exception. This River rlfes in the northern limit of Wiltshire, Willshire, and runs on to the west of Breden Forest to Malmibury, where it receives another Stream, which rifes at Tetbury in Glocestershire, and nearly encircles the place; from thence to Dantfey, 6 miles from which it receives a Stream that runs through Calne, and grows confiderable on to Chippenham, where it hath a Bridge of fixteen arches over it: from thence it flows to Melksham; and having received a River that rises near the Devizes, and a Brook called Barons Brook; thus increased, goes through the middle of Bradford under a Bridge of eight arches. thor of the Tour through Britain observes in Vol. 2, page 31. " The River Avon, a noble and large fresh River, branching it-" felf into many parts, and receiving almost all the Rivers on that of fide of the Hills, waters the whole fruitful Vale: and the water " of this River is particularly qualified for dying the best colours, " and for fulling and dreffing the cloth; fo that the Clothiers generally plant themselves on this River, but especially the " Dyers, as at Trowbridge and Bradford which are the two most " eminent clothing Towns in that part of the Vale, for the making " fine Spanish cloths and for the nicest mixtures." From Bradford it leaves Wilts and enters Somerset; then receiving the Froom from Froom-selwood and another Riverit comes towards Bath. Here it runs through a fruitful Vale bounded on each fide by lofty and magnificent Hills, from whence the subjacent profpect of the Country, the serpentine River, the fair, beautiful buildings of Bath and its sublime and venerable Cathedral are quite enchanting. Here it runs under two elegant Bridges, the first has three equal arches, with small shops and houses on it, handsomely, constructed; and the other, has five arches with a Ballustrade of Stone on each fide.

On the western side of this Bridge is the Quay of Bath, from whence the River is navigable to Briftol, so that Bath is a proper inland Port. Barges that have one mast and sail, and carry from 60 to 80 Tons, bring heavy goods from Bristol, iron, copper, wine, deals and many other articles, and generally return laden with large blocks of Freestone, the use of which is increasing here. The River, though quite fresh, is deep, of a good width, beautifully winds on towards Briftol, in an exquifitely delightful and happy Vale, between verdant hills and rural villages; and fwarms with fine fishes, trout, roche, dace, perch, eels and others: about 2 miles and a half from Bath, it runs under a noble Bridge of Stone of one arch, that for height and expansion seems to rival the Rialto at Venice. A little farther on, is a lofty eminence, beautifully impending over its northern bank, on which are pleasantly situated, the elegant Mansion and Park of Sir Cæsar Hawkins, Bart. Seven miles from Briftol, between Saltford and Bitton, it becomes the boundary boundary between Glocestershire and Somerset, and so continues till it falls into the Briftol Channel. On the eastern fide of the Town of Keynsham, it receives the River Chew, over which is a Bridge on the Bath road; and below the Bridge are confiderable mills and manufactories for copper. Keynsham Bridge has nine arches over Avon, and near it is a lock to facilitate the navigation to Bath: at the highest tides, the salt Sea flows up to this Town. At Briflington, Avon receives another Stream, and flowing on by two works for smelting copper at Crews-hole, it enters the eastern suburbs of Bristol, between glass-houses, iron-founderies, distilleries, breweries, and sugar-houses; goes on to the City, and runs under its last and most eminent Bridge. Here, the Avon is clear and shallow at low water, deep and muddy at high water, but one of the deepest, safest, and most convenient for Navigation, in England. It is 200 feet wide at the Bridge, at high Tides rifes from 25 to 30 feet perpendicularly; (exceeding the Thames in depth, which feldom rifes more than 15 feet,) often overflows the Key; has an agreeable effect when full, renders the port very pleafant, and will waft the largest Merchant Ships and even Ships of War up to the Bridge in the heart of the City. This River has large banks of mud down to its mouth; in the foft beds of which the Ships lie fecurely at low water: and it yeilds some salmon, shads, plaise, slounders, sand'dabs, plenty of eels and immenfe quantities of elvers.

The two greatest Churches of Bristol were so situated by our ancestors, as to be eminently conspicuous from its port. Below Redcliff, at the Key, is the mouth of the Froom; from thence are delectable views of Bristot, Clifton and the Somerset hills, down to Rownham Ferry, a mile further, where the River at high water is 300 feet broad, and the Tide rifes thirty-two feet. Here it begins to flow between two rifing hills, Clifton and Rownham, the former adorned with elegant piles of building, and the latter with Trees and Verdure. Beyond the Hotwell-house, commence the lofty Rocks of St. Vincent, between which the River has a winding course of about two miles. The height of those Rocks, (about 300 feet) the stupendous manner in which they are clest by Divine Power to let the water pass through, some being nearly perpendicular, others hanging over, fome bare and craggy, and others covered with Trees up to the summit, afford scenes which perhaps England cannot parallel, and which richly merit the imitative powers of the Painter, and the skill of the Engraver. The Shores are elevated and beautiful down to Hungroad, a safe harbour for large Ships, and where some are unloaded into lighters. Below this is Pill, a fort of port Town for the habitation of pilots and others. Here the River is about 500 feet wide, and the Tide

rifes 40 feet at leaft. From Pill, it flows through a level country for about 3 miles to its mouth in the Severn Sea, 8 miles below Briftol. Here is Kingroad, from which the Ships take their departure, which is reckoned a good open harbour with fafe anchorage.

The River Froom rifes at Dodington and Rangeworthy not far from Tetbury in Glocestershire; and running through Acton Hambrook and by Frenchay to Stoke, meets a spring from the Duchess of Beauforts park, then to Stapleton, through Baptistmills, enters Bristol at Traitors-bridge, and goes all through the City. Before the present Quay was dug in 1247, the Froom ran from Froom-bridge through the scite of the present Baldwinstreet, beneath the Walls, and emptied itself into the Avon, under St. Nicholas church.

The Quay of Bristol is upwards of a mile in extent or circuit, reaching from St. Giles's-bridge down to the mouth of the Froom, and up the Avon to Bristol-bridge; being one uninterrupted spacious. Wharf of hewn stone, having sufficient depth of water before it for Ships of the greatest burden and fully laden to come up close to the walls and discharge their cargoes. It has different names, as the head of the Key, Tontine Key, Broad Key, the Gibb, Mud Dock, the Grove and the Back. At this Key, lie fafely on a soft bed of mud, a considerable number of Ships, at all times of the year; which make a pleasing appearance, and the large quantities of different Merchandize seen on the Wharfs, prove the very great Trade of the port of Bristol.

On the western side of the Mud Dock, is the great Crane, erected on 14 pillars of cast Iron, by the ingenious Mr. Padmore, a curious piece of Mechanism, and worthy of observation. Cranes of the same internal construction are erected in proper situations for loading and unloading, which are all numbered for more readily finding the fubjacent Vessels.

Some Merchants of Bristol have for many years, had it in contemplation to keep the water up and the Vessels constantly assess in both Rivers, by damming the Avon, at the Redcliff above the Hotwells. Several plans for this purpose have been proposed but none hitherto adopted. But if such a scheme could be executed, without any inconvenient delay in the passage of Ships and Boats, or danger of muddy sediments that might tend to fill up the Channels, it would be a most important and desirable improvement. The plenitude of the Rivers would afford safe riding for the Ships, render the maritime parts of the Town extremely pleasant, and facilitate at all times the passage of Boats and Barges up the River towards Keynsham and Bath. The objections of stench and infection are utterly nugatory. The Rivers of Bath, Exeter, and many other places, are dammed up without offence or complaint, which could not be occasioned here, as the River would be ever in motion. To all other advantages would be added a communication between Clifton and Ashton parishes and the counties of Somerfet and Glocester.

On the banks of both Rivers are several Dock-yards, and dry and stoating Docks for building and repairing the Ships. There are two or three by the Froom, besides the various Docks at Wapping by the Avon, where is also a spacious wet Dock with double gates lately built to keep Ships constantly associated. Below these beyond Limekiln-Dock towards the Hotwells, is a large floating Dock, that will contain 40 sail of stout Ships deeply laden, and which in Jan. 1769 received a 64 gus Ship with ease through its gates. Here are also other Docks, a dry Dock that will hold a 74 gus Ship; and Dock yards where have been built several Ships of War for Government. At all these places, Ship-building and repairing are carried on with great spirit, skill and industry. There was a spacious Dock lower down the River, at Sea-mills, but it has been long dissused and is now in ruins.

We have already page 9, feen that there was a Bridge over the Avon in 1173, which was probably of wood, for in 1767 when the workmen perforated the old Piers to try if they were fit to support the new Bridge, they found in the middle of Redcliff Pier, a sell of oak, about a foot square and forty seet long, with two uprights near each end, about 9 inches square and 9 feet high, morticed into the sell, which they concluded to be the remains of the old wooden Bridge, walled up into the Pier to prevent the trouble of taking them out. The old Bridge of stone, had sour gothic arches, lofty houses on each side, and a gateway in the middle with a Chapel over it; was built 1247 and was 514 years old when it was taken down in 1761.

The present Bristol-bridge was opened in 1768: is built of hewn stone brought from Courtsield in Monmouthshire, consists of three arches, the center arch is elliptical and of 55 feet span, the side arches are semicircular, of 40 feet each. The Piers are 42 feet long and 10 thick. On each side is a balustrade of Portland stone 6 feet high, and a raised way for foot passengers, defended by smalliron pillars and chains: at each end are two buildings of stone for Toll-houses. The Bridge presents an agreeable prospect of Bridge-street buildings, St. Nicholas-church, part of the River, and Vessels lying at the Key called the Back. This is the only Bridge over the Avon at Bristol.

The lowest Budge over the Froome hath two arches of stone, and (as it crosses the Key) a Draw-bridge to admit Coasting Vessels and Severn Trows to pass through it; it is raised by a curious, subterranean, mechanical contrivance of iron wheels with cogs; and requires only two people, one on each fide to elevate it. There is a little octagon house at each end of this Bridge, from which the masts of the Ships appear as thick as Trees in a forest. The next Bridge over this River is St. Giles's at the head of the Key, which has two arches of stone; as also has Froome-bridge just above, and is to this day encumbered with houses on each side. Then follow St. Johns, Bridewell, Needless, Pithay, Union, Merchant's, Philadelphia, Ellbridge, Penn's and Traitors bridges, all one-arched Bridges of stone of various dimensions. So that over this little but useful River which drives several mills, there are no less than 13 Bridges of stone and 4 of wood, in the City and Suburbs.

As there is only one Bridge over the Avon, there are five stated Ferrys for the accommodation of foot passengers. Above the Bridge, 1, from Queen-street to Temple-Backs; below, 2, from the Back to Redcliff: 3, from the Grove to Guinea-street; 4, from the Gibb to Wapping; and 5, Rownham passage, from the Hotwells to Somersetshire. The fare of each one halfpenny.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Trade and Commerce of Bristol, foreign and domestic; its Ships, and various Manufactories.

THE inhabitants of Bristol were very early addicted to Trade, and manufactures. Several ancient Authors represent Bristol as " the most famous place of Commerce in England next to London, frequented by Merchants of many Nations." .It took early to the Newfoundland Cod fishing, and had Trade to Andalusia in Spain, and many other Foreign parts. . By the Charter of Edward 3d. it appears that it was fo confiderable, as to obtain the reputation of being the second City in England for Trade and populousness; and was of so much importance as to be constituted a County within itself. This King established the manufactory of Cloth at Bristol, where it flourished for . long series of years to the middle of the present century, but is now much declined, and removed to other places where labour is cheaper. Bristol has been anciently and frequently celebrated by the Writers of our own and other Countries. Busching wrote, that " This City for its pru-"dent regulations is perhaps out-done by none, and for its vaft " Commerce, Wealth and Shipping by very few trading Cities in " Europe." And Dr. Campbell, " As to foreign Commerce, if we view it in gross, Bristol is next to London; but if the value of that Commerce be compared with the fize of the respective Cities, Bristol has the start; and except in a few branches, to the participation participation of which, of late, the begins to put in her claim, in point of intercourse with all parts of the World, her correspondence is as extensive." Such are the accounts of it, by a Foreigner and by a Briton.

Among the Ships of Canynges we find one of goo and one of 500 tons. The Letters patent granted by Henry 7th, 1415, to John Cabot for making discoveries in America, prove that the Bristolians were some of the first adventurers to the West Indies, in the Trade to which only, they at this time employ upwards of 70 large Ships. The Merchants of Bristol trade with a more entire independence on London than any other port in Britain. Whatever exportation they make to any part of the World, they can bring back the full returns to their own port and are able to difpose of them there, without shipping any part for London, or configning their Vessels thither to dispose of their cargoes, which the Merchants of other ports are obliged to do: they have buyers at home for their largest importations; and consequently the Shopkeepers of Bristol (many of whom are wholesale dealers) keep up a great inland Trade, and have Waggoners, Carriers and Riders, as the Londoners, to all the western Counties, and principal places from Southampton to the banks of the Trent in the North. And as well by Sea, as by the navigation of the Rivers Severnand Wye, they have the Trade of South and part of North Wales to themselves, as also of the English Counties bordering on these Rivers and on the Bristol Channel. They have heavy goods by Water from Birmingham, and from the North of England by Trows; not less than 100 of these Vessels from 50 to 130 tons, being employed on the Severn in carrying goods to and from Briffol. Their Trade to Ireland is much increased, many Ships being constantly employed to the various ports of that Kingdom, from which they import, tallow, linen, woollen and bay yarn.

The foreign Trade of this City is very great to Florida, Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, New York, Philadelphia, Newfoundland, Quebec and Nova Scotia. Ships export our manufactures (which are fent through the vaft continent of North America) and return laden with tobacco, rice, tar, deer fkins, timber, furrs, indigo, and logwood: and from the West Indies, with sugar, rum, pimento and mahogany.

The Ardor for the Trade to Africa for men and women, our fellow creatures and equals, is much abated among the humane and benevolent Merchants of Briffol. In 1787 there were but 30 Ships employed in this melancholy traffic; while the people of Liverpool, in their indifcriminate rage for Commerce and for getting money at all events, have nearly engroffed this Trade, incredibly exceeded London and Briffol in it, employ many thousand sons of shipping, for the purposes of buying and enslaving God's rational creatures, and are the venders (horresco referens) of the souls and bodies of men and women! to almost all the West Indian islands!!!

The Merchants here carry on the Dutch, Hamburgh, and East-land Commerce; send Ships to Norway, the Baltic and Russia, for hemp and deals; and to the Mediterranean; and import great quantities of fruit, wine and oil. Exclusive of those Ships which arrive here from different parts of the world, either to dispose of their cargoes, or to get freight, there are about 300 sail employed in foreign Trade, belonging to Bristol, besides coasting Vessels, large Trows, market Sloops and other craft which are very numerous. The Customs of this port amount annually to upward of £300,000; and the Excise to more than £100,000. The revenue of the Post-Office sabout £15,000, of the Land-tax about £8,000, and of the Poor rate, (in 1786,) £12,000.

Besides the foreign Trade there is scarcely any kind of business or manufactory, but what is carried on in a greater or less degree in this City. In the shops are seen as capital exhibitions and as great a variety of all forts of goods, as are to be met with in the Kingdom, which are rendered at reasonable rates. The shop-keepers at Bristol, live by fair Trade and not by imposition, and are remarkable for their activity, industry, upright, punctual and obliging behaviour.

The plenty and cheapness of coals and other fuel, enable the Merchanis to carry on large Works here and in the neighbourhood; and to render the Manufactories on the lowest terms possible. Baptist-mills, on the River Froom but a little way from the eastern suburbs of Bristol, is the first place in which Brass was made in England. The original workmen were brought over from Holland. The great quantity made here, is either drawn into Wire, or formed into what is termed battery, for the Guinea Trade and other purposes, and is sent to London, Liverpool and most parts of the Kingdom.

About 2 miles East from Bristol, near Hanham, on a bank of the Avon, are the Works of Mr. Emerson for preparing Zinc or Spelter. Here is produced some of the purest Brass in the World. Its fine and excellent contexture and malleability, cause a great demand for it among the most curious Artificers at Birmingham and other places, and considerable quanties of it are exported. Dr. Watson, in the 4th Vol. of his Chemical Essays, expresses thus, "The Zinc made by Mr. Emerson, is whiter and brighter than any other, either English or Foreign. He has a patent for making Brass with Zinc and Copper; and his Brass is faid to be more malleable, more beautiful, and of a colour more resembling Gold than ordinary Brass is. It is quite free from knots or hard places, arising from iron, to which other Brass is subject; and this quality as it respects the magnetic needle, renders it of great importance in making Compasses for Navigation."

The great demand for glass bottles for the Bristol Water, for the exportation of beer, cyder and perry; for wine, and for the use of Town and Country, keep the various bottle glass-houses here constantly at work. The call for window glass at home, at Bath and in the Towns about Bristol; in the western Counties, Wales, and from North to South wherever the Bristol Trade extends, and the great quantities fent to America, employ several houses for this article. Here are likewise two houses, in which are made white or flint glass, and phial bottles. They who are flrangers to the working of window glass, and to the blowing of white or flint glass, which is formed into such a variety of modes and forms, may gratify their curiofity of observing these curious operations, by presenting a small gratuity to the workmen, who living in hot climates are very glad of some suction to moisten their The times and places of attending these processes are as clay. follow:

At Vigor and Co's glass-house, Redcliff-back, flint or white glass is worked every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday; and at Cannington and Co's, and Wadham and Co's, called the Phoenix glass-house, both near Temple-gate, on the same days.

At Vigor and Co's glass-house in St. Thomas-street, window glass is made every Monday and Saturday in the morning; at the crown glass-house in St. Phillips on the same days.

The glass trade has been a very considerable manufactory, for many years in Bristol; it is now rather on the increase, and perhaps there is more manufactured here than in any place in England: The number of glass-houses is about twelve, situated toward the out-skirts of the Town, and in the suburbs.

There are large iron-founderies in St. Phillips-parish for casting ind of iron utenfils and artillery; and here is a steam-engine for boring Cannon in the folid. In the same parish are considerable lead works, where lead is smelted from the ore, and rolled, or cast into sheets, pipes and other articles for the use of Plumbers. Near to this the proprietors of the last mentioned; have erected an extensive house for preparing white and red lead. The small shot cast at Bristol are preferred abroad to any other, on account of their colour and rotundity. The Patent shot which exceed all, and are so much esteemed, were invented by Mr. William Watts, plumber of this City, who made them here and obtained a patent for his discovery. They are still manufactured on Redelist-hill.

There are near 20 large fugar houses in Bristol, in which more

Sugars are refined than in London, proportionably to the extent and popularity of each City. This branch of Trade employs a great many hands. Coals being in the neighbourhood and much cheaper than in London, loaf Sugar is made here and fold on better terms than it can be any where else. The single refined Sugars of Bristol are more esteemed, and will get a higher price abroad, than those of other places.

There are capital Distilleries here, erected at vast expence, in different parts of the City. Vessels are loaded with Spirits for London, and even supply that City, where already Distilleries are carried on to such a degree, as almost to exceed belief. The internal consumption here being great, and the exportation to Africa, Quebeck, North America and Liverpool increasing, the duty on them paid to Government, amounts to many thousands a year.

Postlethwaite in his Dictionary of Trade and Commerce, informs us, that the first manufacture of Soap in England was in Bristol. In 1523 it supplied London with the best grey speckled Soap, and with white at 1d. per pound. The Bristol Soap is now very superior to any made in England; and large quantities of it are sent to London and most parts of the Kingdom.

The Breweries of Bristol are numerous and extensive. Maltliquors are cheaper, finer and better herethan in most other Towns. Good Ale is universally sold for 3d a quart, and Burton (a fort of strong Beer) for 4d. There is a large Porter Brewery in Bathstreet, which succeeds well in rivalling London Porter, and meets with great encouragement.

A Patent has been granted to John Garnett, Efq. of Briftol, for his invention to lessen friction in all kinds of wheels, blocks for Ships, grindstones, and rollers; this contrivance is of much importance to all who are concerned in Mill-work where great powers are required; for by its use, a far less force answers every purpose, and the movements being rendered more casy, the works of course last longer and seldom want repairs. The works are carried on near College-street, and are called Garnett and Co's. Patent wheel and block manufacture.

Opposite the Hotwell-house on the bank of the Avon, is a large Building that contains a Mill for spinning worsted, which is worked by a stream of pure water that springs immediately from the Rock behind, runs through the house and falls into the River.

The Woollen manufactory is not entirely taken away from Bristol; some woollen stuffs, serges and other cloths are made here. The manufactures of tilk lace and fringe, and of fail-cloth must not be omitted, nor those of Queens and different forts of Earthenware; of toys, and of Tobacco-pipes, which last are exported in great quantities.

A confiderable number of hands mult necessarily be employed on the many Ships and Veffels which are built at Briftol; and in the various Trades requisite to compleat them for the Sea; and also of feamen to navigate them in their respective Voyages.

Little Armies of Builders, Masons and Carpenters have been engaged in the several new Buildings in and about the City. The present War has put some temporary stop to these desirable ornaments, real improvements and airy and salutary conveniences. But it is hoped that the spirit and resources of the more opulent Citizens will excite them to raise every one of these beautiful and elegant Piles to its destined summit, and to leave them as monuments of the taste of the present age, and as valuable and profitable denations to their successors

Of the Fairs, Markess, Coals and aubolesome Waters of Bristol.

RISTOL has been long famous for its Fairs, which are flill very confiderable and well frequented, and some of the largest in the Kingdom; each of them being for all sorts of wares and merchandize, and the time of both generally protracted to a formight, though chartered only for 9 days.

-St. James's Fair, which is the greatest of the two, commences on the 1st of September, and is held in the spacious Church-yard of St. James, and in some adjacent streets. Temple Fair begins on the 1st of March, and is held in and about Temple-Street, on the fouth fide of Bristol-bridge. At these is usually a great sale of every thing in the woollen manufacture, cloth, coarse and fine, carpets, rugs, blankets, and stockings; cotton stockings from Tewkefbury &c. linen cloth; hardware from Birmingham, Sheffield, Walfal and Wolverhampton; millenary, haberdashery, ribbons, female ornaments, dresses and trinkets from London and other places; lace from Buckinghamshire and the West; buck, doe and hogs skins for breeches; horses, cattle, toys, and a great variety of other articles. During these Fairs there is more tanned leather fold at the Leather-hall, mear the Back, than at any other Fair in England. Also a very great quantity of ticking for beds is vended at the Tick-ball. For the amusement of the populace there are not wanting exhibitions of wild beafts and birds, waxwork, wire-dancing, tumbling, ballancing, puppets, Punch and his wife Joan, fea-fights, conjuration, magic and mummery of all forts, recommended by merry-andrews, buffoons; drums, trumpets, french-horns, fiddles, rattles and vociferation. The shops and flandings. standings for these Fairs are built and covered with wood. At St. James's they are disposed into streets and rows, and are generally a month in preparing.

The MARKETS of Bristol are the following: I. The general or Exchange-market. This has a very handsome entrance from High-street, consisting of a losty gate, two posterns, and a gate-house over, all of freestone. This is the principal Market and is situated on the south side of the Exchange. The rows for butchers meat are constructed of wood, covered with cornish tile; are eight in number, each distinguished at the ends, by a capital letter from A to H; and every stand in the rows is numbered from

I to 157, fo that any butcher may be eafily found.

There are three other Market-houses, which are covered arcades of confiderable length and breadth. In these the farmers and country folks fell butter, cheefe, poultry, eggs, pork, bacon and many other articles. One of these has a noble appearance, is in the fouth front of the Exchange, and is called the Glocestershiremarket; the numbers of the stands here are 62: The arcade to the west is called the Somersetshire-market, and the stands are 68. The other arcade to the east, extending from the butchers rows to the Market-gate, has 52 stands. Opposite to this last are eight shops; also thirteen others of freestone towards the Post-office, and ten covered stands before the fouth front of the Exchange, all for vegetables, fruit &c. Between the butchers and Somersetshire arcade, is a row of ten covered stands for slowers, and roots in pots, plants and shrubs for the green-house or garden. The great plenty variety and cheapness of provisions in this Market, the profusion of its vegetables, fruits and flowers, their sweet and reviving fragrance, as they prove it to be perhaps unequalled in Britain, so they charm the sight, gratify the smell, and increase the health of those who frequent or visit it, whether Citizens or Strangers.

II. St. James's-market in Union-street, for every fort of animal and vegetable food as the other; the shops and stands are numbered in the same manner, and these Markets are open every day for vegetables, but for slesh, only on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

III. At the Butcher-row near Lawfords-place, is a Market every Wednesday and Saturday for flesh and vegetables.

IV. The Fish-market, which used to be held at the head of the Key, is removed to St. James's-market in Union-street, and plentifully supplied with every kind of fish in its proper season; the Market days are Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. Also at the Back are continually fold, salmon, cod, mackrel, herrings, place, slounders, oysters, crabs, lobsters, sprats, shrimps &c. brought by the Boats in great quantities, sufficient to supply Town and Country.

V. At the Welch Market-house on the Back, opposite King-street, are for sale every Wednesday, pigs for roasting, geese alive, or ready for the spit; turkeys, ducks and sowls. Large quantities of apples, pears, plumbs, damsons, walnuts, silberts and hazlenuts, in their seasons, which occasion a vast plenty of those fruits in all parts of Bristol.

VI. The Cheese-market opened in Jan. 1787, is held every Wednesday and Friday in Corn-market-lane, in two convenient Market-houses, built for the sale of corn, now disinsed here.

VII. Corn, flour and barley for the use of the great distilleries, malt-houses, brew-houses, corn-factors and bakers, are brought by water carriage, from the west country, the vale of Evesham, and Counties of Hereford, Monmouth, Glamorgan and Worcester, and landed at the Back, or at the head of the Key, where are convenient Market-houses for securing them from the weather, and there are exposed to sale every spring Tide.

VIII. St. Thomas's-market is held every Thursday for horses, living cattle and pigs, in St. Thomas-street, the Smithfield of Briftol.

IX. In Broad-mead (now the Hay-market,) is a large Market for hay and straw every Tuesday and Friday.

X. The Market for the fale of raw hides, calves skins, and all forts of unwrought tanned leather, is held at the Leather-hall near the Back, every Wednesday and Saturday throughout the year. And at the same place is a Market for tanned leather every Thursday.

Wood for firing, faggots, brooms &c. are for fale under sheds on the Back. Great quantities of cyder are brought to the Back and the head of the Key. All forts of fish, vegetables and fruit, fresh butter and numerous other articles are hawked and cryed daily about the streets, which are resounding from morning to night with the harsh music of those ambulatory, mercantile orators.

The advantages arifing to the inhabitants from having plenty of coal fo near to the City are very great, as well from its use to families who burn it profusely, and to poor people who are rendered warm and comfortable by it, in the winter, as to the various manufactories of glass, sugar, spirits, iron and brass, in which there is a great consumption of it. There are pits all around the City, in Glocestershire at Kingswood; and in Somerset, at Bedminster, Ashton, Nailsea and Brislington. But the most copious supply is from Kingswood, in which there are a great number of pits and colliers houses, which last are so frequent and numerous, that Kingswood has from the neighbouring hills the appearance of being one vast, rural suburb of Bristol. There are several pits within half a mile of the Town, at Upper and Lower Easton and near Lawrence-

Lawrence-hill. To those who choose to fetch their coals from pit, they are fold there at 3da bushel for large, and 2d a bushel for small. They are brought to Bristol in waggons, carts and on horses, and are fold to the inhabitants at 14d the sack which holds two bushels and a half.

There is a fort of large coal which burns very clearly and makes chearful fires, and is brought from the forest of Dean in Glocestershire: this is chiefly used for parlours and chambers and is sold by the ton weight at the head of the Key.

The sweetest and most wholesome waters from pumps and conduits placed in every street, are always to be had here in the greatest plenty; for the support and supply of which, competent benefactions have been left by well disposed Citizens. The conduits, properly situated in various parts of the Town, are supplied from pure springs that rise in the neighbourhood, which are conveyed in leaden pipes to flow for the accommodation of the inhabitants. The pumps both public and private are numerous, and all of them emit from the sand, rocks and strata beneath, the clearest and most excellent water. So that while the people of many other Towns are drinking brackish draughts, or the contaminated puddle of their Rivers, the people of Bristol are imbibing health and purity with every potation.

CHAP IX.

Of the civil Government, Corporation, Officers, Jurisdiction, Capris, Wards, Prisons, trading Companies, Halls, Lighting, Paving, Police and Arms of this City.

BRISTOL has an high Steward. In the year 1651, Oliver Cromwell sustained that character, his salary was £5. per ann. and a pipe of canary: half a ton of gascoine wine was tent to him as a token of respect. The present high Steward is the Duke of Portland.

The government of the City is administered by a mayor, (whose person and office are highly respected here, and who is rarely or never seen in the streets unless in his coach during his mayoralty) a recorder, twelve aldermen, all justices of the peace, two sheriffs and an under sheriff, 28 common-councilmen, town-clerk, deputy town-clerk, chamberlain, vice-chamberlain, steward of the sheriffs court, clerk of the arraigns, and register of the court of conscience, &c. There are other officers pertaining to the corporation, sword-bearer, two coroners, water-bailist, key-masters, school-masters, clerk of the markets, keepers of the prisons, inspector of nuisances, cight ferjeants at mace who carry maces of filver, criers of the courts, common cryer, exchange-keeper, sheriffs-officers, club-men, beadles, a city marshal, and a good band of musicians in constant pay; all of whom have their particular gowns, dresses and liveries, in which they precede the corporation in public processions, which are made in a long range of elegant carriages. They have the highest marks of honor granted to magistracy, scarlet ermined gowns, gold fringed gloves, four swords, (presented to the mayors on various occasions, one by King Henry 7th, and a very old one in an embroidered sheath with this motto,

mace, and cap of maintenance. Gentlemen of the greatest worth and capital in the City, deem it an honor to serve this large community in the magistratical capacity.

This opulent Corporation are possessed of very large estates, both in City and Country, in trust for charitable uses and the public emolument of the Citizens; for supporting hospitals, schools, alms-houses, and exhibitions at the University, for establishing lectures and gift sermons for the instruction of the people, for relieving prisoners and confined debtors, for keeping the poor at work, for the marriage of poor freemen's daughters, for repairing the roads round the City; and especially of large stunds for the use of young tradesmen; £100.£50.£25. or less to be lent to them free of interest for seven or ten years. The Corporation are also patrons of several Church livings in City and Country, and have it in their power to promote and establish young clergymen of genius, learning and real worth.

The jurisdiction of Bristol by water extends from Tower-harratz up the River, down to Kingroad, and from thence down the Bristol Channel, as low as the Flat-holmes (on which is a Lighthouse of 70 feet high, and a public-house) and to the Steep-holmes (noted for being the place of retirement of Gildas the ancient British historian,) and from thence eastward to the Denny island, and from thence again to Kingroad.

By the charter of King Edward the 4th. 1461 Bristol was exempted by land and water from the jurisdiction of the Admiral of England; and a commission was to be granted by the Crown to the mayor and recorder, as often as shall be needful, to enquire into all such contracts, agreements, trespasses and offences, which were wont to be enquired of, and determined by such Admiral, or in the court of Admiralty. So that the mayor, recorder and aldermen, hold in the Guildball, a Sessions for general jail delivery, and trial of all capital and criminal causes within the City and Liberties on land or water, as often as may be necessary, once or twice a respecting or fall. A court of Nin prius for law suits, entirely respecting civil causes, is held at the said Hall, in the autumn of every year, by one of the Judges who go the western circuit. The mayor and aldermen with the town-clerk (who presides as Judge) hold a quarter session for trying less criminal causes; also a Court of Conscience is held every Monday for the recovery of debts under 40 shillings. The two sherists hold courts in the Guildhall, for determining writs of enquiry; and a pie-powder court inautumn, under a piazza in that spacious street called the Old-market.

The mayor or fome of the aldermen, hold a daily fessions in the Council-house, to hear complaints and accommodate differences; make orders, take bail, and commit offenders.

The Corporation have feveral processions in the year, at Michaelmas to St. Mark's-church, which is the Mayor's-chapel, to hear divine fervice, before the mayor is fworn into his office at the Guildhall; and to the same church with the recorder, previously to the trial of capital offenders. Also on the 29th of May and the 5th of November, they go in their coaches, preceded by the officers, music and some companies with their gowns and flags, to aftend divine fervice at the Cathedral church: on the last of those days, before the mayor goes into his carriage, one of the fcholars of the City grammar-school, being elevated in the Council-house, commemorates the deliverance from the Powder plot, in a Latin oration to the Corporation and crowd attending; and after he has finished, he dismounts and goes to the mayor who rewards him with a piece or pieces of gold according to the merit of his performance. It is an ancient custom of the Corporation, and still continued; to visit every Whit-funday and attend divine service in the afternoon; at the old venerable church of St. Mary. Redeliff, which on this occasion is strewed with tushes and crowded with people. Every mayor is allowed Lisoo from the chamber of Bristol to support the dignity of his office, and the two sherists have £420 each.

This City is divided into twelve Wards.

Trinity Ward, Maryport, St. Michael's Caffle Ward; St. Ewin's Redcliff. St. Stephen's All Saints, St. Nicholas' St. James's St. Thomas'

cach of which has an alderman to prefide over it. The recorder is always one of the aldermen, and by virtue of his office is reckoned the principal: his ward is Trinity. The prefent recorder is Richard Burke, Eq. a penetrating, patient, mild and merciful Judge. The fenior alderman after the recorder is stilled the Eather of the City. Every ward has one chief constable, and twelve others; a night constable, and a proper number of watchmen under him; so that the whole posses comitatus is numerous, and in general, sufficient to keep the peace. There are for the several wards, watch and round houses, standard boxes; scavengers and lamplighters. The Guard-house for foldiers is in Wine-firest.

At the eastern end of this street is Newgate the City jail for debtors and malesactors. That gate which has been lately taken down, was (before there was a passage through the Castle) one of the principal entrances into the City. It was very strong and had a port cullis for its defence, as appeared by the grooves on the top of the arch and on each side of the gateway. The Prison has been enlarged and improved by a late act of Parliament, and a spacious tennis-court added to it, so that it is much more healthy and convenient than before. Here is a decent chapel with galleries, in which the Ordinary, appointed by the Corporation, performs divine service. Both the Prisons of this City were judiciously placed close by the River Froom, which supplies them with air, and receives and washes away the filth of those populous Colleges: Newgate generally containing from 80 to 100 debtors and malesactors, male and female.

The Corporation have lately obtained an act of Parliament for building and supporting a new jail, on Howards plan, to be erected on the loftiest part of the site of the old Castle, which is undoubtedly the most eligible spot in Bristol for a Prison. This bill enforcing a perpetual tax, has occasioned a contest between the Citizens and Magistrates, the Citizens are willing to pay a temporary tax for building the Prison, but not to be obliged to pay for ever towards its support; especially as the Corporation have hitherto supported it out of the City stock; and as taxes are already numerous and heavy. It is hoped that this controversy will end, as all others should be made to do, in mutual condescention, a discovery of truth and right, and in adopting and pursuing such a plan as will tend to the satisfaction and benefit of the whole community.

Bridewell the other City prison has two gates and within them two opposite fronts of the buildings, which are for the commitment, consinement, and correction of offenders. Those parts of the Town not under the government of the magistrates of Bristol, and which are large and populous, both in the counties of Glocester and Somerset, are governed as the out parts of London are, by justices of the both counties; and have constables, bailiss and cryers for the different districts. A spacious strong prison of stone, on the Howardian plan has been lately completed for the suburbs of Bristol in Glocestershire. It has 70 seperate cells, a chapel, a hall for the justices in its front, which extends about 150 feet; and the whole is surrounded with a strong wall 20 feet high. This stands at the end of a street called Glocester-street, and as it is without without the place where Lawfords-gate flood, it is named Lawfords-gate Bridewell. Here and in another part of these suburbs are held weekly Courts; as there are for the suburbs of Bedminster in Somerset, which have also a Bridewell, tho' but little used as offenders are quickly fent to Shepton-mallet jail.

The fociety of Merchant Venturers were incorporated in this City by Letters Patent of King Edward 6, in the 6th year of his reign; and afterward confirmed by Queen Elizabeth and King Charles the 1st. They have lands to the amount of upwards of 3000 per annum for the support of Alms-houses and other charitable uses; a noble Hall to meet in, and an Alms-house adjoining for decayed Seamen. This society consists of some of the principal Merchants and Gentlemen of the City and its environs, frequently of the prime Ministers or of the Secretaries of State, and it has been honoured with the names of Nobility and of some of the Royal Families. This respectable Company always act in conjunction with the Corporation for promoting the commerce, trade and improvement of the City. The Companies of this City are 24; the other 23 are as follow:

Taylors ·Wire-drawers Turners. Cordwainers Pipe-makers Weavers Tanners Carpenters Surgeons Butchers Smiths Halliers Bakers Porters Hoopers Whiterawers Inn-holders Tylers Masons. - Sadlers Dyers Hatters loiners-

These Companies had heretosore their halls, gowns, slags and formalities; now some of their trades are nearly extinct, others are dissipated, and a few still remain who precede the mayor when he goes in procession to the Cathedral. The Merchant-taylors and coopers are yet wealthy Companies, and have elegant modern halls. The weavers-hall is turned into a Jews synagogue, the Tuckers' into an independent meeting, the Bakers' into a school-room, and the Smiths' into a cooperage, &c. proper signs of the downfall of trading combinations and monopolizations. So large a City as Bristol should be as free as air, and as open as Birmingham, in which all persons are at liberty to exercise their trades and callings. The Corporation of Bristol, latterly do not molest or interrupt tradessmen and artificers who set up here; and the freedom of the City may be purchased at a very moderate sum.

London was first lighted with lamps in the reign of King Charles the 2d. The act for lighting Bristol was not procured till the latter part of the reign of King William 3d. This act obliged Citizens to hang out their own lamps: subjequently, public lamps were lighted for half the year only, but for many years past, have been kept burning every night during their proper hours. Many of the principal streets and places of Bristol are well lighted, and the new, patent lamps with glass lustres on each side of the stame, shine quite brilliantly; while in some of the more obscure streets, lamps are so scarce, that the light that is in them is almost darkness. This neglect calls for attention and remendation.

The streets are well paved on each side with stat stones for foot passengers; and smooth cross-ways from street to street executed very neatly. The Corporation are attentive to the police of the City, and keep in constant pay an inspector of missances. The streets are cleaned stwice a week; the sootways swept every morning; there are twelve stands of decent hackney coaches all numbered, in various parts of the Town; massiff dogs are muzzled; watchmen are stationed in a fort of centry boxes so judiciously all over the City, that persons may (in general) pass securely at any time of the night: and the mayor and aldermen are ready (on complaint at the Council-house) to redress every grievance and to rectify every abuse.

The Arms of Bristol are a Ship and Castle; and the motto, Virtute et Industria. Long may these excellent qualities of virtue and industry be exhibited, and the characteristics merited by the inhabitants of Bristol. The practice of virtue and industry are the surest method of acquiring wealth and honor. May the names of Bristol Merchant or Trader be ever respected for strict justice, and for more than that, for liberal and extensive benevolence. This motto reminds me of a passage in Seneca's epistles, a falutary document and memento to every reader "Ivur ad astra, frugalitate, temperantia, fortitudine, aliisque virtusibus. By frugality, temperance, fortitude, and the other virtues, we ascend to Heaven!

CHAP. X.

Of the buildings of Bristol in general, the principal ancient and modern Streets, the Squares, open Places, and conveniences for ambulatory exercitation.

BARRETT observes that the whole City is well built, considering that it has never yet been burned down and rebuilt, or even suffered much by fires." Guthrie in his geographical grammar, afferts that "Bristol is not a well built City." Perhaps Barrett might be too partial to the Town, and Guthrie unacquainted with the greater part or all of it. The truth is that the internal and most ancient parts of Bristol, have a much better appearance pearance than the buildings of most other old Cities and Towns, as great sums have been expended in rebuilding and new fronting them. But still, we can see something of Bristol as in its ancient state, so distant as about two or three or more centuries ago. The great house on St. Augustines-back, now Colston's-school; a spacious old mansion in Small-street with a large bow window, (which perhaps received King Charles the 1st.) the north east corner of High-street; some houses in Baldwin and Maryport-streets, the Pithay, Lewins-mead, on the Broad-ware, Temple-street and other places; may help us to ideas of what the City was in former times. To give a proper description of this place-It is an ancient Town surrounded by a modern. The internal and and antique parts of the City, now confift of an irregular mixture of ancient and modern houses; of wood and plaister, of sharp and flat topped fronts, projecting and perpendicular, of brick and flone, lofty, inferior and diffimilar. Though these most ancient streets have of late years been widened and improved, and feveral new streets, totally, handsomely and uniformly built, viz. Bridge-street all of stone, the houses four stories high and elegantly sinished; Clarefreet, Union, and Bath-streets of brick ornamented with stone, with feveral others. The modern and external parts of Bristol are more regularly, handsomely or elegantly built of brick and stone, and all other buildings are prohibited by act of Parliament. most spacious, of the old streets, are the Old-market, West-street, Caftle-fireet, Peter-fixeet, Broad-mead, part of Wine-fireet, High-fireet, St. Augustines-back, the broad Key, King-street, and over the Bridge, Temple, and Thomas-fireets, and Redcliff-hill. The most regular, beautiful or elegant streets of the external and modern parts, are Park-street, Great George's and Charlotte-streets, built entirely of freeltone, College-freet and Trinity-fineet of brick; Unity and Orchard-freets and Princes-freet the most spacious of all, each of slone and brick; and in St. James's and St. Paul's, Stokes-croft, St. James's-barton, Cumberland-fireet, with too great a number of others to mention, that are decently and handsomely constructed. These contain many large, or convenient houses for genteel families, let at moderate rents, and with the other conveniences peculiar to Briftol, such as coals, wholesome air, and water, plenty and cheapness of provisions, attract families to fettle here and to occupy the new houses that are always erecting.

The Squares in various parts of the Town are nine.

I. HOPE Square, at the western part of the Town, so called from Lady Hope, who sounded a chapel, which stands on the eastern side of it. This is built on a declivity, has two other sides of brick houses and the fourth irregular.

II. DOWRY Square, a little to the east of the other. This is is handfomely built of brick and has a neat garden or plantation with a walk around it inclosed with rails.

BERKELEY Square stands on a gentle slope on the north east side of Brandon-hill. This Square is lately erected, all elegantly built of freestone and externally finished; some houses are inhabited, and the rest fitting up for tenants. The houses are on three fides only, the fouth east fide is left open, near to which a new street (Charlotte) being fince placed, it has the appearance of a fourth fide from the upper part of the fquare. The spacious area of this elevated, pleasant and beautiful pile, is inclosed from the coach ways by a dwarf wall and iron pallifades. The upper flories of these houses command a view of great part of the City; and agreeable objects, villas, houses and Cottages among the trees, in the adjacent country; and in a clear day Devonshire-place, near Holloway, Bath, which may be feen also on Brandon-hill, Durdbam-down, King fdown and several other neighbouring hills. and are the only buildings connected with Bath that are visible at The upper parts of Bath can be viewed from Herridgecommon, below Dundry, 3 miles from Briftol; and on Dundry-hill and tower.

IV. QUEEN'S Square, the largest in Bristol, and in England, (excepting Lincoln's-inth in London) including seven acres and a quarter. The houses are all handsomely and uniformly built, chiefly of brick with a few of stone. It has eight avenues, one at each corner and one in the middle of each row. There are courts before the houses, and smooth footways and a carriage way between the courts and the area, which is inclosed with rails, and has on each side a spacious gravel walk bordered with elms. There are gravel walks from each avenue that lead to the centre, in which upon a high pedestal of Portland stone, surrounded with iron rails and lamps, is a curious equestrian statue of King William the third, cast of copper and done by Rysbrack. The whole square has a magnificent appearance; the walks and grass being rolled and kept in the neatest order by an officer who has an annual salary. Here are the Custom-house, Mansion-house and Excise-office.

V. KINGS Square, remote from the last, to the north west of St. James's, is on a gentle slope at the bottom of Kingsdown-hill, the ascent to which from this square is very steep, yet covered with houses up to and beyond the summit. The houses are uniformly built of brick ornamented with stone; the whole area surrounded by rails and lime trees; the walks neatly gravelled, the square clean, wholesome and pleasant, and well lighted with lamps.

VI. BRUNSWICK Square, in St. Paul's parish, is built of brick ornamented with stone. The eastern side is an elegant pile.

The area is inclosed with rails and trees.

VII. St. JAMES's Square, is well built of brick; its houses are large and good; it is neatly paved all over with stone, and has in the centre an obelisk of freestone about 20 feet high and sour lamps.

VIII. PORTLAND Square, so named in honor of the Duke of Portland, the present high Steward of Bristol. This is a new square, the houses are all built with freestone and covered in; some are inhabited. The northern and southern sides are beautifully elevated and similar, as are the houses and terminations of the other sides, but in the centre of the eastern side, is completely built, a beautiful church and steeple in modern gothic, dedicated to St. Paul. The area of this square is circular, inclosed with iron pallisades, and when sinished, as it will not be the seast (being 300 feet on each side) so it will be the most regular, and elegant square in Bristol we might almost add in Britain.

IX. SOMERSET Square, the only one on the fouthern fide of Bristol-bridge; at Redcliff, not far from the church. This is in a retired fituation, neatly built of brick, the area is a garden, inclosed by a dwarf wall, with walks for the inhabitants. It has a pleasing opening and prospect into Somersetshire of a verdant valley between hills, terminating in Dundry hill and Tower.

There are several other open places in Bristol that are not square. the principal of which, is the COLLEGE GREEN. This is on a fine elevation; its plan is nearly triangular; on the fouth fide are the Cathedral, St Augustine's-church, and the fine old gate of the monastery: on the north fide, St. Mark's-church commonly called the Mayor's-chapel. There are some very good modern houses of stone and brick, and a spacious way for carriages on each The green is inclosed with rails, within which a gravel walk quite shaded with lime trees, bounds the whole area. There are two spacious walks between stately elms that pervade the whole; the principal is from East to West, and the other across it, from North to South, leads to the door of the Cathedral. This on all accounts is the pleafantest, and next after Queen-square, the most spacious place in Bristol. An officer is paid annually for rolling and keeping it in repair; and the walks are lighted with lamps by night.

This is the mall or public walk of Bristol, and is most frequented and crouded on Sunday evenings, in summer, as the Park at London. There are some other open places, not square, such as St. Augustines-place; St. James's-barton, and St. Phillip's Broad-plain, which are decently built and inhabited.

There are public parades and convenient and agreeable places to walk on, for the inhabitants in most parts of the Town. For the western parts, there are the colonade, and the shaded walk by the River, one for rainy and the other for fair weather; also the paved parade near Dowry-square. An elegant spacious mall is planned and two fine uniform rows of freestone houses entirely built up at Clifton. In the City there are the gravel walk on Brandon-hill, the walks in College-green, and in the Cloisters when shelter is necessary; the noble walks in Queen-square, the fine terras walk by the River, behind Bridge-street, defended by a grand iron pallifade about 660 feet in length, and which needs only to be paved all over with flat stones, to render it complete; the parade in St. James's church-yard; another on Kingsdown, and the walks in King's and Brunswick squares, all of which are open to the public. For the inhabitants fouth of Bristol-bridge, there are the walks in Redeliff church-yard; and also Redeliff-parade which stands on a lofty elevation above the River, has an iron pallifade (with lamps) the whole length of the edge of this beautiful terras; and from whence there is a pleasant prospect of the City, Harbour and Shipping.

CHAP XI.

Of the Cathedral Church of the Holy Trinity.

H AVING briefly treated of that large mass of buildings named Briftol, which are the principal, as they contain all its inhabitants, let us now attend to the public buildings, which, in comparison with the others, are but sew, and devoted to particular purposes. And it will be highly proper to begin with those that are dedicated to the use of the worshippers of the eternal, divine, invisible, and infinitely great and good Creator and GOD, who is the only righteous object of our supreme veneration and gratitude; and who graciously accepts the homage sincerely intended for HIM, to whatever names, sirm or form it may be erroneously offered, and from the good and well-meaning of whatever denomination.

As London has two great Churches, St. Pauls and Westminsterabbey, and as Dublin has two, Christ-church and St. Patrick's; Bristol has also two principal Churches, the Cathedral, and the Church of St. Mary at Redcliss, which as they are eminent above the others, are venerably conspicuous from the surrounding hills and country.

The CATHEDRAL Church was originally the Abbey Church of the monastery of St. Augustine, which were founded by Robert Fitzharding, fon of Harding, a younger fon of the King of Denmark. Robert of Glocester the old monkish poet gives some account of Harding.

A burgeys of Bristow tho' Robert Hardynge, For grete tresour and richesse so well was wyth the Kyng, That he yast him and his heires the noble barony That so rych is of Berkely, with all the seignorie; And thulk Robert Hardyng arered suth, I wyss An Abbey at Bristow of St. Auslyn that is.

He was made Lord of Berkeley by King Henry the second, who patronized, and contributed towards this foundation. The ancient and superb gate and gatehouse of the monastery are still remaining, though the height of the arch is lessend by the rise of the ground in so many hundred years. The gate is of Saxon architecture, in use before the Gothic with pointed arches was become universal, and is of most curious workmanship: the scrolls, twists and other ornaments are so interwoven and intricate, that it is difficult to trace them out. This gate, with its ancient inscription, the old Cathedral Church, the Cloisters, Chapter-house and remains of the manastery about the Lower-green, are worthy the attention of the Antiquarian, Architect and Connoiseur. The inscription over the gate, in one line of old English letters is literally as follows:

Rex henricus fecudus et dns Robertus fili' herdyngi filii regis daciæ huj' monasterii primi sfundatores extiterunt. That is:

"King Henry the second, and Lord Robert, son of Herdyng, son of the King of Denmark, were the first founders of this monastery." In 1148 Simon Bishop of Worcester, Robert B. of Exeter, Geosfrey B. of Landaff and Gilbert B. of St. Asaph, dedicated the church to St. Augustine. A monument is erected to the memory of Robert Fitzharding, under an arch in the Lady-chapel just within the door, it is inclosed with iron rails, and near the tomb, is the following inscription on marble:

"The monument of Robert Fitzharding, Lord of Berkeley, descended from the Kings of Denmark; and Eva his wife, by whom he had five sons and two daughters: Maurice his eldest son was the surst of the Family that took the name of Berkely: this Robert Fitzharding laid the foundation of this church and monastery of St. Augustine, in the year 1140 the fifth of King Stephen, dedicated and endowed it in 1148. He died in the year 1170, in the seventeenth of King Henry the second. This monument was repaired A. D. 1742.

From the said Robert Fitzharding Lord of Berkeley, Augustus

the present Earl is the two and twentieth in descent."

From the dedication of this monastery to its dissolution in 1539 it had 26 Abbots, several of whom, scandalized religion by their licentious and profligate lives. At the visitation, prior to the dissolution, the last of them was found to have a little ecclessifical Seraglio of fix ladies, coarsely stilled by Fuller and Speed "Lewd women,"

At the diffolution of monasteries by King Henry the 8th, this noble church, then about 350 feet in length, was partly demolished, and part just preserved from the fate of other venerable Aructures, the ornaments and boast of the country. The destruction of those buildings was inexpressibly absurd. If the lives and manners of their inhabitants were depraved and noxious, the stones and buildings were innoxious, and might have been rendered useful, as temples for divine worship, hospitals, schools and workhouses. Some of the paltry parish Churches might have been taken down, and these noble structures preserved, but to save the former, and to demolish the latter, was certainly the most egregious folly. The rapacity of the reforming commissioners of those times was fuch, that for the fake of the lead on the roof, they eagerly fet to work on it, and after they had stripped it off, proceeded to destroy the structure itself. But King Henry, to palliate his facrilege, and make a show of refunding, having determined to establish six new Bishopricks, of which Bristol was one, and having been informed that there was enough of the fabric left standing for a Cathedral, by express order, put a stop to its further demolition, and the western part being taken away, it was left in that ruinous condition in which it still remains. The revenue of this monastery amounted to 1,767. 15. 3. which he settled on the Bishop, dean and chapter. He annexed the county of Dorset to this diocese, which, with the City of Bristol, and some environs in Glocestershire, containing 236 parishes, are the whole of the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Brutol. King Henry commanded the church to be from thenceforth denominated. The Cathedral of the boly and undivided Trinity of the City of Bristol: and in the year 1542 appointed Paul Bush, an Augustine Frier of Oxford, Canon of Salisbury and one of the King's Chaplains, the first Bishop of this See: who is faid to have had great skill in physic, and wrote a treatise on saives and curative remedies. He has a monument near the eastern end of the northern aile, with a statue of a skeleton on his tomb, which has this infcription. Hic jacet Dominus Paulus Bush; primus hujus ecclesia episcopus, qui obiit 11 die Octobris anno domini 1558, atatis sua 68, cujus anima propitietur Christus. Here lies Paul Bush, the first Bishop of this church, who died 11th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1558 aged 68: on whose soul Christ have mercy. The present and 35th Bishop is Dr. Spencer Madan, Prebendary of Peterborough, Rector of West-halton, and Vicar of Haxny, Lincolnshire.

It would be useless to present our readers with merely the names of the Bishops, and instead of such a list, we shall give a few brief particulars of the most noted. John Holyman, 1553 was a zealous oman catholic preacher, and writer against the Lutherans. Rich-and Fletcher, 1583, attended Mary Queen of Scots on the scaffold. and killed himself by immoderately chewing or smoaking tobacco. Robert Wright, 1622, had the stone Pulpit made and the opposite feats for the Corporation. Thomas Westfield, 1651, was deprived by the Parliament, and stiled himself, "The meanest of Bishops, and the chief of Sinners," Thomas Howell, 1645: The army turned his Palace into a Malt-house, and himself out of doors. John Lake, 1684, was one of the feven Bishops committed to the Tower by James the zd. Jonathan Trelawney, 1685, corresponded with William Prince of Orange and was a friend to the Revolution. Thomas Secker, 1734, was an Author of several fermons and tracts. But the two principal literary, scientific and useful characters on the lift are, first, Dr. Joseph Butler, whose sermons and Divine analogy are monuments of his learning and good intellectual abilities. He was very generous, annually expended more than he received from the whole See; repaired the Palace; in 1750 proposed to the Corporation the building a new Church at Kings. wood for instruction of the Colliers, and gave £400 towards it. The second, is Dr. Thomas Newton, 1761 to 1782. This gentleman was a good practical Preacher, and a friend to liferature and literary men. He published a commentary on Milton's Paradise lost and regained, which has gone through 8 or 9 editions. His life of Milton is a very curious, impartial piece of Biography. He published differtations on the Prophesies, in 3 Vol. octavo, and feveral other tracts and fermons.

The present Cathedral, consists of the spacious cross of the old Church, the tower on the middle of it, and all the rest of the Church eastward. On the outside of the Church are observable the strength and dimensions of the abutments, which project 10 or 12 feet from the walls: and also the tower, which is square, well ornamented, crowned with battlements and 4 pinnacles, is one of the largest towers in England, and is a considerable object in and about the City, particularly from Clifton, Ashton, Bedminster and from Mardyke, in the street leading to the Hotwell. The ground before this Church has been fo much raised, that there are 8 steps from the door, down to the Church pavement. To be convinced of the greatness of this tower, the stranger needs only to stand under it, and observe the dimensions of the arches which support This Church is in length from East to West 175 feet, the breadth of the cross from North to South 128 feet; the breadth of the body and ailes, 73 feet, and the height of the tower 130. A little to the west of the Church, is still visible, at the lower part of a summer-house, at a projecting corner, part of the abutment of the western end of the northern aile of the Church; which plainly shows how far it extended before its demolition.

The roof of the Church is all beautifully arched with flone, and of different patterns, and has these peculiarities, that the height of the nave and ailes is equal; and that the roofs of the two ailes are incomparably curious, (arches supporting arches) and deserving the attention of those who have a tase for Architecture.

In the body of the Church, are a handsome Pulpit of stone, ornamented with the arms of the King, Prince of Wales, Bishoprick, Bristol &c. and also seats for the Bishop, Clergy, Corporation and Audience. The screen that is before the Choir has a beautiful gate, and paintings of the 12 minor Prophets, in pannelled niches. This supports a noble and excellent organ, in a superb and capital case, with fimilar fronts to the Choir and outside. There is also a small organ which fronts the Choir beneath the other. Choir is neat, in the gothic taste, and has proper seats for the Bishop, Dean, Archdeacon of Dorset, Chancellor, 6 Prebends and 4 Minor Canons. The steps that lead to, and the platform of the Altar, are paved with black and white marble. At the Altar is a painting of a triangle, forrounded by cherubs, done by Vanfo-The window to the East of the nave, and the four other windows of the Chancel, are of painted glass: and the two windows at the ends of the ailes are of enamelled glass, representing various scenes of scriptural history. This Church has many gothic beauties and feveral handsome monuments ancient and modern.

Near to the north-door, is an elegant highly finished monument to Mrs. Draper, the celebrated Eliza of Sterne. It is in the form of a gothic arch of Sienna marble, on which are two beautiful female figures of white marble, in alto relievo, standing on each side of a pedestal, which supports an urn, with a wreath of slower hanging down. The figure on the right, which represents Genius has her left hand on her breast, and in her right, the trumpet of Fame with a stame issuing out of it. The other figure represents Benevolence, contemplating a nest in her left hand, in which a Pelican is nourishing her young with her blood. Her right hand points to the inscription on the pedestal, which is thus :

Sacred to the memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Draper, in whom genius and benevolence were united.

Within the rails of the northern aile on the right hand, is a monument to the memory of Mrs. Mason, composed by the Rev. William Mason.

Mary, the daughter of William Sherman, of Kingston upon Hull Esq. and wife of the Rev. William Mason, died March 27, 1767, aged 28.

Take holy Earth all that my Soul holds dear Take that best gift which Heaven so lately gave To Bristol's fount I bore with trembling care Her faded form, the bow'd to taste the wave And died. Does youth, does beauty read the line? Does sypathetic fear their breasts alarm? Speak, dead Maria; breathe a strain divine: Ev'n from the grave thou shalt have power to charm. Bid them be chaste, be innocent like thee, Bid them in duty's sphere as meekly move; And if so fair, from vanity as free, As firm in friendship, and as fond in love: Tell them, tho' tis an awful thing to die, ('Twas ev'n to thee) yet the dread Path once trod, Heav'n lifts its everlasting Portals high, And bids the pure in heart behold their God.

Nearly opposite to the above is a losty monument to the memory of Mr. William Powell, an excellent actor in Tragedy and Comedy, who built the Theatre Royal in King-street, and died at Bristol. On a pyramidal table is a bass-relief of the deceased, and the following inscription:

William Powell Efq. one of the Patentees of the Theatre-Royal, Covent-garden, died 3d of July 1769, aged 33 years. His widow caused this monument to be erected, as well to perpetuate his memory, as her own irretrievable loss of the best of husbands.

Bristol! to worth and genius ever just,
To thee our Powell's dear remains we trust:
Soft as the streams thy facred springs impart,
The milk of human kindness warm'd his heart;
That heart, which every tender feeling knew,
The soil where pity, love and friendship grew.
Oh! let a faithful friend with grief sincere Inscribe his tomb, and drop the heartfelt tear,
Here rest his praise, here sound his noblest same,
All else a bubble or an empty name.

G. Coleman.

Opposite is a neat monument

To the memory of Elizabeth Washfield, who died at the Hotwells, the 26th December 1770, aged 60, wife of Robert Washfield Ess. of Mile-end near London; this monument, from a just sense of her merit and of his own loss, is erected by her disconsolate husband.

Dear shade, adieu, the debt of Nature's paid!

Death's threaten'd stroke we parry'd but in vain;
The healing spring no more could lend its aid,
Med'cine no more could mitigate the pain.

I 2

See by her dying form, mild patience fland, Hope, ease and comfort in her train she led: See gentle spirits waiting the command, Hush her to silence on the mournful bed.

In vain with heartfelt grief I mourn my friend,
Fair virtue's meed is blifs without alloy:
Bleft change! for pain, true pleafure without end,
For fighs and moans, a pure feraphic joy!

When death shall that new scene to me disclose, When I shall quit on earth this drear abode, Our freed, congenial spirits shall repose Safe in the bosom of our Saviour God.

In the Charcel is a monument to the memory of the learned and Rev. Dr. Nathamel Foster, formerly Prebend of this Church, and Fellow of Christ-church College, Oxford, to whom we are indebted, for the most correct and beautiful edition in quarto of the Hebrew Bible, without points, ever published in England. His excellent and justly merited character is well drawn up in Latin.

In the fouthern aile.

Sacred to the memory of the Rev. Samuel Love, A. M. Fellow of Baliot College, Oxford, and one of the Minor Canons of this Cathedral.

When worthless grandeur decks the embellish'd urn, No poignant grief attends the sable bier, But when distinguish'd excellence we mourn, Deep is the forrow, genuine the tear.

Stranger! should'st thou approach this awful shrine
The merits of the honor'd dead to seek;
The friend, the son, the christian, the divine,
Let those who knew him those who lov'd him speak.

Oh! let them in some pause from anguish say,
What zeal inspir'd, what faith enlarg'd his breast,
How soon th' unsetter'd spirit wing'd its way,
From Earth to Heav'n from blessing to be blest.

This, and feveral other monumental inscriptions in Bristol, were the productions of Miss More, a Lady whose least excellence is that of her fine genius for Poetry; and whose prosaic works will remain more important proofs of her mental discernment and penetration, and of her just conclusions.

The above-mentioned Mr. Love, composed the following lines on a robin red-breast, who frequently in time of, divine service perched perched on one of the pinnacles of the organ, and joined the music with his warbling effusions, (as the story goes) for fifteen years together till 1787.

Sweet focial Bird! whose fost harmonious lays Swell the glad fong of thy Creator's praise, Say, art thou conscious of approaching ills? Fell winter's storms-the pointed blast that kills? Shun'st thou the favage north's unpitying breath? Or cruel man's more latent snares of death? Here dwell secure; here with incessant note, Pour the foft music of thy trembling throat. Here, gentle bird, a fure afylum find, Nor dread the chilling frost, nor boist'rous wind. No hostile tyrant of the feather'd race, Shall dare invade the in this hallow'd place; Nor while he fails the liquid air along, Check the shrill numbers of thy cheerful fong. No cautious gunner, whose unerring fight Stops the swift eagle in his rapid flight, Shall here difturb my lovely fongster's rest, Nor wound the plumage of his crimfon breaft. The truant school-boy who in wanton play, With viscid lime involves the treach'rous spray, In vain shall spread the wily snare for thee, Alike fecure thy life and liberty. Peace then, fweet warbler to thy flutt'ring heart, Defy the rage of hawks, and toils of art; Now shake thy downy plumes, now gladlier pay Thy grateful tribute to each rifing day; While crowds below their willing voices raife, , To fing with holy zeal Jehovah's praise, Thou, perch'd on high, shalt hear th' adoring throng, Catch the warm strain, and aid the sacred song, Increase the solemn chorus and inspire Each tongue with music, and each heart with fire.

In a chapel to the western end of the southern aile are several monuments to the family of the Newton's. One, to the memory of Sir Henry Newton of Barrs-court in the county of Glocester Knt. who died 1599, has this inscription:

Gourney, Hampton, Cradock, Newton last, Held on the measure of that ancient line Of Barons blood; full 70 years he past, And did in peace his facred soul resign: His Christ he lov'd, he lov'd to feed the poor, Such love assures a life that dies no more,

There

There is a door which leads out of the western part of the Church to the Cloisters, the square of which was 103 feet each way, but the western and southern sides are taken down; the eastern fide leads into the Chapter-house and Bishop's Palace : 'the first is an elegant, curious building of 46 feet by 26 and contains the epifcopal library, and the last was repaired and partly rebuilt by Bishop Butler in 1744. At this time, happened the following accident: A parcel of plate supposed to have been hidden in the sime of the civil wars, fell through the decayed floor in a corner of one of the rooms; the floor being taken up, a room appeared below, in which were found many human bones, and instruments of iron to punish and torture criminals. At the same time was difcovered a private passage to this dungeon, originally constructed with the edifice, being an arched way within the wall, just large enough for one person to pass through, one end terminated in the dungeon, and the other in an apartment which appeared to be a Court of Judgment.

There are divine service and chanting here every day at 11 in the morning and 5 in the evening: and a sermon on Sunday morning. In the tower are 5 bells, a tenor of about 3500 cwt. on which are struck the hours, 2 bells which sound the quarters, and s others that are tolled for prayers.

The ancient and beautiful high cross, adorned with eight Kings, which stood in the centre of the College-green, was taken down to hay open the principal walk, and given by Dean Barton to Sir Richard Hoare of Stourton, who has erected it in his elegant gardens.

In the elder Lady-chapel of the Cathedral is a device of a Ram, playing on a Violin with a remarkably long Bow, and a Shepherd fleeping while a wolf is devouring the sheep. This proves that the use of the Bow was known at the time of building this most ancient part of the Church in 1148. Though some have supposed that it was not known before the 14th century; others have afferted that it was first used in England by the musicians attending the Popes Nuncio, when he came here to receive the Peter-pence.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Church of St. Mary, at Redcliff.

HIS is commonly called Redcliff-church, being founded on a red, fandy rock or cliff. Its parish, with that of St. Thomas, Temple, and Bedminster, are very extensive and equal to a City; and like Southwark in London, lie on the southern side of the City and River. There is a great Church on each fide of the water at Bristol, but the Church at Redcliff is the most curious and sublime. Camden observed, that "this Church is like a Cathedral," for it rises to a noble height above the neighbouring houses, embellishes and digniesies that part of the Town, and the various perspective views of the City. The same Author has left on record, that "on all accounts it is the sinest parish Church in England." It is certainly, a stately, venerable and beautiful gothic structure; internally in high preserve, and an antique worthy the attention of the Traveller and Connoiseur.

It was founded in the year 1292 or 4, by Simon de Burton, fix times mayor of Bristol; and was built of stone dug out of the quarries of Dundry. It was many years in building; brought to its present state (probably) by various benefactors, and according to the Mayor's Calendar, was sinished in the year 1376, and was then celebrated all over England. The tower and spire of stone were about 250 feet high: but at St. Paul's tide, 1445, by a terrible storm of thunder and lightening great part of the spire was thrown down; and the roof, part of the nave, and particularly the southern aile were much damaged. The spire was never rebuilt, but was covered in as at present; and the Church and roof were thoroughly repaired by Mr. William Cannings an opulent merchant, and several times mayor of Bristol; of whom the reader may fee further particulars in his epitaph.

This Church is about 3 furlongs from Bristol-bridge, and stands on an eminence, on the eastern fide of Redcliff-street. The Churchyard is inclosed from the street, and also on the southern side by a ballustrade of freestone. The ascent to this structure is by a slight of steps of Purbeck stone, many of them 18 feet long. The Church is old enough to have a most venerable appearance, however it is a very light building, being almost all windows. Though the tower is large, it is richly ornamented, with variety of carved work, niches and statues. On the northern side of the tower are statues of our Lady and Jesus; and in a nook behind, of the founder. Upon the tower are four high pinnacles, and part of the spire; from the middle of which rises a spindle that supports a large handsome gilded cock, the height of the whole 160 feet; the belfry contains a fonorous, deep peal of 8 bells, the heaviest in Bristol and these parts. In William of Worcester's notes on Bristol, are the weights of fix of the bells, (to which two were added in the beginning of this century) and that of the tener is 7000lb. and upwards. Barrett without authority affirms that all the bells were re-cast in 1762; many of the parishioners must know that he was mistaken, and that only two or three of the upper bells were recast that were cracked or out of tune. The Church is built inform afa cross, and like a Cathedral, the nave rises above the ailes and is enlightened by a series of losty windows on each side: It has one peculiarity that adds much to its internal beauty; and that is, that the cross has a nave and ailes similar to the body of the Church, which have a fine effect when the spectator stands under the middle of the cross and looks around him.

Redcliff-church has received the general approbation and applause of all good judges, for though it is large and spacious, it has a light and airy appearance; the pillars are neat and slender, and wrought into the most delicate mouldings. The roof near 60 feet high is all arched with stone, and that of the nave and those of the ailes which are also of stone, abound with devices and ornaments beautifully carved. The whole Church with our Lady's chapel, is 239 feet in length, and the cross aile from North to South 117 feet. The breadth of the nave and ailes is 59 feet and of the cross have and ailes 44 feet. The height of the ailes from East to West is 25 feet, which is the height of the two cross ailes from North to South. The height of the nave from the western door to the high altar is 54 feet, equal to which is the height of the nave of the cross. The Lady's chapel 42 feet long, has been divided from the Church and is used as a grammar-school; and the length from the western end to the high altar is now 197 feet. In short, the arches, pillars, roof and whole building of this Church are fo truly light and elegant, that it may be defervedly viewed as a curiofity, and esteemed one of the finest parish. Churches in England.

The principal entrance is at the western door; which is 8 feet broad and 12 high; there are also two handsome porches on the northern and southern sides of the Church. The northern porch is a most curious and beautiful gothic structure, especially internally; and is worthy the attention of those who visit the Church, it has some little pillars of stone called dumb organs, which when struck by the person who shows the Church, sound like the deep notes of an organ out of tune. The whole building is covered over with lead.

The best views of the inside of the Church are at the western door; ander the middle of the cross; and at the high altar. Opposite to the pulpit is a throne with a canopy, to receive the mayor, aldermen and sheriffs when they annually visit this fine old Church on Whitsunday. The sloor of the chancel and steps to the altar, are of black and white marble. At the entrance of the chancel are irongates, gilded and richly ornamented; as there are also at the western entrance of each aile of the Church. The altar is quite in a rich and superb stile. Over it are three capital paintings by Hogarth. That on the middle is the largest, and represents the Ascention of Christ. That on the northern side is the High Priest and servants sealing the stone of and on the other, the women coming to look for the body of Christ, and the Angel, who tells them, he is not here, he is risen. All these are large and losty, in richly carved and gilded frames. Sir Cliston Wintringham Bart. one of the King's physicians, has lately presented to this Church a picture of Jesus raising the daughter of Jairus to life, painted by Mr. Fresham the Baronet's nephew, of the Royal Academy. This is advantageously placed in the middle of the Altar. In the centre of the cross ailes is a pillar and eagle of brass about 5 feet high, the gift of a pin-maker of this parish.

At the western end of the nave stands on arches an elegant gallery of stone, with a dial in a pediment, on which is a grand magnificent organ, which for fize, height, compass, diameter of pipes, and richness of tone, is exceeded by none in the West, but by that in the Cathedral of Exeter, which is the largest in England. It measures in height from the ground, 5'3 feet, and contains upwards of 1000 speaking pipes, of which the builders Messrs. Harris and Byfield published an account at the time of its being put up in this Church. The case is very elegant and was designed by Mr. Strahan architect, who built Redland-court-house. At the northern end of the cross, is a baptismal font of white marble, beautifully constructed, placed on an elevated floor paved with marble and railed Under one of the arches of the tower, is kept as a relick, a large crooked bone, called the Dun Cow's rib, faid to be a rib of the monstrous Dun Cow killed by Guy Earl of Warwick. I shall add to this short account of the curious beauties of this ancient fa-'bric, that Leland called it, " Ecclesiarum omnium longe pulcherrima," by far the most beautiful of all Churches: and Camden, " Ecclesearum omnium parochialium (quas unquam vidi) elegentissima. " So large it is, and the workmanship so exquisite, and the roof so artisicially vaulted with stone, and the tower so high, that in my opinion, it is the most elegant of all the parish Churches that I have yet seen in England."

Divine fervice is performed here twice every Sunday; and there are prayers in week days. The hours are firuck on the great bell, and there are chimes at 1, 5 and 9 to an ancient folerm plalm, tune, suitable to the grand tone of these tenerable musical instruments.

This Church is adorned with many elegant monuments, and fome, though old, have a profusion of carving and gothic work bestowed on them. At the southern end of the cross aile, is a stately monument of Mr. William Cannynges in his magisterial robes, and of Joan his wife, lying on an altar tomb, in full proportion, under a canopy handsomely carved in freestone, under which,

within the statues are the following inscriptions on a table:

There is also another monument of Mr. Canynge, with his statue well carved in alabaster, lying in his priestly robes as Dean of Westbury, with hands lifted up, and a large book under his head.

In

[†] This has given rife to a vulgar tradition, that he had committed Piracy at Sea, for which he was fined 2000 Marks; inflead of which the King accepted 2470 tons of Shipping The truth is thus: Cannings having affifted Edward the 4th in his necessity with the above fum, the King granted him in lieu of his loan of gift, to have 2470 tons of Shipping, free of impost, as appears by the original influment being in the Exchequer. One of the Judges, who was viewing the Church, and heard the Sexton relate the old story about Piracy, reprimanded him for aboung the memory of so pious and worthy a Man; and gave this explanation of the pallage.

In the same aile are two other monuments worthy of our notice. One is of Sir William Penn Knt. the father of Mr. William Penn who was one of the Freends, a considerable writer among them, proprietor of Penfylyania and founder of Philadelphia.

"Sir William Penn Knight, born at Briftol 1621, of the Penns of Penns-lodge in the county of Wilts. He was made Captain at 21; Rear-Admiral of Ireland at 23; Vice-Admiral of England at 31, and General in the first Dutch War at 32: whence returning in 1655, he was chosen a Parliament-man for Weymouth; 1660, was made Commissioner of the Admiralty and Navy, Governor of the Forts and Town of Kingfale, Vice-Admiral of Munster and a member of that provincial council; and in 1664 was chosen great Captain commander, under his Royal Highness in that fignal and most evidently successful fight against the Dutch fleet. took leave of the fea, his old element, but continued his other employs till 1669, when through bodily infirmities (contracted through the care and fatigue of public affairs) he withdrew, prepared and made for his end, and with a gentle and even gale in much peace arrived and anchored in his last and best port; at Wanstead in the county of Esfex, 16th September, 1670, being then but 49 years of age and 4 months. To whose name and merit his surviving Lady erected this remembrance."

The other monument at the northern end of the aile has the following inscription by Miss More.

"Near this Pillar are deposited the remains of Mrs. Fortune Little; widow of Mr. John Little, late of this parish. She died June 28, 1777, aged 57.

Oh, could this verse her bright example spread, And teach the living while it prais'd the dead, Then, reader, should it speak her hope divine: Not to record her saith, but strengthen thine; Then should her every virtue stand confess'd, Till every virtue kindled in thy breast: But if thou slight the monitory strain, And she has liv'd to thee at least in vain, Yet let her death an awful lesson give! The dying Christian speaks to all that live: Enough for her that here her ashes rest, Till God's own plaudit shall her worth attest.

Hannah More."

On the outfide of the Church, near to the fouthern end of the cross, fronting the East, at the second abutment there is a small space inclosed with iron rails, behind which on a marble stone are K 2 inscribed inscribed the following lines written by the late Rev. Emanuel Collins, poet and fatyrist of this City.

All Flesh is grass;
And the beauty thereof as the flower of the field.
Had restless Time! whose harvest is each hour,
Made but a pause; — to view this lovely flower,
In pity, he'd have turn'd his Scythe away,
And left it blooming to a future day.
But ruthless! he mow'd on, and it alas!
(Too soon) fell withering with the common grass!

In memory of Johanna Rowland, a woman beautiful in her person, equally so in her mind; who quitted this earthly stage for that of sublime bliss, in the 22d year of her life, 1752, and lies interred underneath.*

The Church yard is spacious, the walks are shaded with trees and kept very neat. There was an ancient, elegant cross of stone in the centre of it, from which, formerly, sermons were preached, it was taken down about 20 years ago.

This vicarage connected with those of St. Thomas in Bristol, Bedminster and Abbots Leigh, are in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury, and afford a considerable income to the incumbent.

From the leads of the Cathedral and Redcliff towers, there are delectable views of the City and Country, up to these summits are good stairs of stone; and in a fine day, strangers may gratify their curiosity concerning the extent and situation of Bristol, better than they can from any of the neighbouring hills or eminences.

CHAP.

to Instead of the Epitaph written by the Rev. Mr. Collins, on a Cudgelplayer of Pensford, which is inserted in the old Bristol Guide, we shall give to our readers an Epitaph on Skidmore, a late eminent Pugilist of Bristol, who died very reluctantly of a Consumption, a few years ago.

Skidmore the great à bruifer of renown,
Dreaded by bruifers in and out of Town;
From a much greate: bruifer met his fate,
By Dearn the bruifer was most foundly beat.
When De. th and Skidmore first began to box,
Death gave to Skidmore most tremendous knocks;
And all-throughout this fdd, unequal batile,
Death made poor Skidmore's stesh and bones to rattle:
Skidmore try'd hardly to recover breath,
But was at last obligid o yield to Death.
Learn hence, ye who this bloody art have us'd,
By Death the bruifer you must all be bruis'd!

ALL-SAINTS Church in Corn-street, is a very ancient, neat, gothic structure, with a modern steeple in which are eight musical bells: on the tower is a curious octangular lanthorn with a dome of stone, sinished with a ball and cross built in 1716. The Church has three ailes, the middle aile is 70 feet long and 49 high; the side ailes are of equal length, each 30 feet high, and the whole 60 feet wide. The internal part is beautiful and elegant, the Altarpiece is rich, and has a painting of the Salutation of the Virgin Mary; the organ is gilded, and supported by fluted pillars with gilded corinthian capitals. There are several monuments.

Thomas Colston Efq. mayor and alderman of this City, died

16th November 1597.

Death is no death, now Thomas Colston lives, Who fourfcore years hath lived to his praise; A joyful life now Christ to him doth give,

Who wrong'd no wight, each man commends his ways,

Death him commands to bid this world adieu, Thrice happy those who die to live anew.

Here is a noble lofty monument of marble to the memory of Edward Coliton Efq. who was a native of this City, and a great and eminent benefactor to it. His statue is in a recumbent posture, and exquisitely done by Rybrack: over it is an inscription of his many public benefactions.

Sir John Duddlestone Bart. lies here, who was an eminent tobacco-merchant, and when Prince George of Denmark came to see the City, was the first person who invited him to his house, in consequence of which, the Prince first got him Knighted, and then a Baronets patent.

St. AUGUSTINE's, at the entrance of College-green; was mentioned in deeds fo early as the year 1240; but in 1480, it was to decayed as to require to be rebuilt: fince that it has been lately enlarged and galleries built in it, to accommodate the inhabitants of this increasing parish. This Church is in the gothic stile, confilts of three ailes, the principal of which is 102 feet in length, and the breadth of the whole 42 feet. It is a spacious, handsome Church, has a fine gilded organ in a mahogany case, a beautiful Altar-piece, the pulpit in the middle aile, and some monuments. The tower is square, has 4 pinnacles, is about 50 feet high, the the lowest in Bristol, and contains a tener and a small bell.

BEDMINSTER Church, dedicated to St. John Baprif, is very ancient; on the north-west abutment of the tower is a stone with a date 1003 upon it, so that it must have been built in the reign of King Ethelred. It is a vicarage, is mother Church to Redelist and St. Thomas in Bristol and Abbots-Leigh; the parish is of large extent and gives name to a hundred. The Church, (situated in a southern, large and populous suburb of Bristol) has two ailes, the longest about 90 feet, a gallery, several monuments and a handsome Altar-piece. The tower is large, low, has stone-railing and sour pinnacles, and a rising between them on the top, which supports a vane: it has two bells, on the largest of which the hour is struck. This Church has the appearance of great antiquity, and stands in a very pleasant and rural Church-yard. On Easter and Whitmondays, vast numbers of young people slock from Bristol to a fort of revel held there on those days.

CHRIST CHURCH, stands in the centre of the City. taking down part of the spire of the old Church to rebuild it in 1765, a date of lead was found let into the stone near the top 1003 or 1004; this was a handsome gothic structure and was taken away to widen Wine-street in 1786. The present Church was begun in the same year, and finished and opened about 1790. The body of the Church having houses before it, is not visible in the streets, the steeple only is apparent, which is all of freestone, and confilts of a handsome tower ornamented on the stage above the Church with 16 Ionic pillasters that support four pediments, the stage above this (that contains a peal of ten fine bells) has on each fide four corinthian pillasters, and at each corner of the tower is a large handsome vase. On the tower is an octangular, perpendicular base of about 13 feet high, which supports an octangular obelisk of 70 feet, on which is elevated a gilded dragon; the whole is 160 feet high, and is one of the handsomest steeples in Briftol. The Church is in the modern tafte, the roof is beautifully arched, and supported by columns, has three ailes, elegant Altarpiece and organ, and a most beautiful set of brass chandeliers.

CLIFTON Church stands on the summit of that part of Cliftonhill, about a quarter of a mile from the boundary of the City at Jacob's Jacob's-well, and contains in its parish some part of the liberty of Bristol. This Church has a plain outside, the inside is neat, and agreeable; it consists of three ailes, has a gallery the breadth of the whole Church, and many marble monuments, but most of them are small. The tower is of hewn stone, square and low; has pinnacles and two bells. In the Church-yard is a tomb with an urn upon it, and the following inscription:

Sacred to the memory of George Lewis, fourth fon of George Lewis of St. Pierre in the county of Monmouth Efg. who was unfortunately drowned in crossing the Severn in a small boat, on Sunday 6th of November 1774, aged 16.

As some young Pine of aspect tall and fair, That promis'd to reward the Planter's care; Pleas'd he beheld it arriwering his toil, Thrive, and proclaim the goodness of the foil; When, all at once, a whirlwind blafts his care. Tears up his plant and scatters it in air; So far'd it with the youth we here deplore, O'erwhelm'd at once, and drowned near the shore: The crazy boat unable to fustain Her swelling fail, is buried in the main. In vain for him his friends explore the deep, In vain, with nets, the treach'rous bottom fweep; For fix long months, the sport of every wave, His floating body fought in vain a grave; But tofs'd from rock to rock, from fand to fand, Till a kind Pilot tow'd his corps to land. Nor should, for this, his friends indulge despair, But with this consolation wipe the tear, That the same GOD is present every where; And the strait gate that leads to endless bliss, Stands in the air, the earth, and great abyss. Nor could a youth like this forfake his way, Had he fat out from Lapland or Cathay.

St. EWEN's Church, in Ewent-court near Broad-street, is very ancient, mentioned in deeds so early as 1140; is the smallest Church in Bristol, having only one aile 66 feet long. The tower is square, 60 feet high, with battlements on the top, and contains two bells. The parish being by a late act of Parliament united with that of Christ-church, the Corporation are empowered to take it down, when some intended improvements shall render its demolition necessary. The cost for a breakfast on Corpus Christiday 1460 is thus entered on the Church book,

St. JAMES's Church, in St. James's church-yard, was anciently a Priory founded by Robert Rufus, natural fon of Henry 1st. who was made Lord of Bristol in 1109, and died and was buried in this Church 1147. It was built and confecrated in 1130; made parochial and the tower added 1374 by the parishioners, which is 90 feet high, has a modern ballustrade, and an urn at three of the corners, and at the fouth-west corner over the projecting staircase, a lofty pinnacle with a weather-cock on it; and beneath in the belfry, an excellent peal of 8 flour bells. The Church is beautiful, the arches are semicircular, of Saxon architecture, the length near 100 feet, breadth 66, height of the middle aile 47 feet. It has galleries, a large and noble organ, fine Altar-piece with a capital painting of the transfiguration, and feveral elegant monuments. The hour is struck on a bell elevated on the leads of the tower, in the front of which is a handsome dial.

So strict observers of the Sabbath were the people of this parish, that in 1679, at a vestry then held, four persons were judged guilty of a most heinous crime, and were cited into the spiritual Court for purloining the Lord's day in travelling to Bath on foot, to the great distinguished Almighty God and true religion; for which they confessed their fins in the said Court, and paid zos. for the use of the parish.

St. JOHN BAPTIST Church; when, and by whom it was built see page 23. The Church is handsome, 80 feet long and 24 broad, has a gallery, and a vault underneath; the tower stands upon the northern gave of the old City, has a dial to the North, and another to the South, and fix hells, on the tenor of which is struck the hour; and upon the tower is a neat spire of stone, with a cock, about 110 feet high.

St. MARK's Church, College-green. This was formerly called the Gaunts Church and was collegiate. It was founded and built by the Gaunts and Gourneys, about 1230, whose tombs and monuments are yet to be feen in the aile. The breadth of the Church next to the green is 39 feet, the length of the body of the Church 123 feet; the breadth exclusive of the aile (which is not used for worship) 24 feet, the height 37. The tower is 91 feet high, has four pinnacles and a peal of fix bells. There are several good monuments both in the aile, and in the body of the Church, which is built North and South. The organ, Altar-piece and furniture are very handsome; it being a Curacy, the property and under the patronage of the Corporation, who attend divine worship in it, and therefore it is commonly called, the Mayor's Chapel. In the front are a large gothic window, and freesome portico with five arches.

St. MARY LE PORT, commonly called Maryport-church, was founded by William Earl of Glocester, about 1170. It stands on a rising ground above the Avon, from which there was a gradual descent to the River, where, very anciently Vessels used to discharge their cargoes, whence came the title of Mary of the Port. This is a handsome Church, has two ailes, the southern is 107 feet long, the northern 73, and both, 37 in breadth. The arches and pillats are neatly sluted and painted, the monuments, epitaphs and altar, are worthy of notice. The tower has 4 pinnacles, and is 80 feet high, and to the cock on the large pinnacle 95; it contains a musical peal of eight bells.

St. MICHAEL's Church, on St. Michael's-hill. There was a Church here to early as 1193, but the prefent, was founded in July 1775 and opened in June 1777. The outfide of the building is modern gothic, fuited to the old tower, which is preferved and is about 90 feet high, has 4 pinnacles and a peal of 6 bells. This Church has three ailes, supported by handsome pillars of freestone, is 62 feet broad and 77 feet long, exclusive of the tower to the West, and chancel to the East, has a spacious gallery, elegant Altar-piece, brass branches, monuments &c. and a vault under the whole Church for burial.

St. NICHOLAS Church, near Bristol-bridge. There was a Church here so early as 1172, the present structure was finished 1768, is all of freestone in the modern gothic; has a series of seven large windows on each fide, and a vault for burial beneath. This is a stately building of 100 feet long and 50 broad; and being a spacious lofty room without a pillar, the cieling richly ornamented with stucco, and the pulpit (in the middle aile near the chancel) Altar-piece, organ and gallery, branches and other furniture very elegant, it has a pleasing effect. On the tower is a beautiful spire which is 202 feet to the cock. The bells are a large, sonorous musical peal of 8, and a stout bell in the middle of the spire which founds the hour. There are feveral monuments in the Church and vault, but the principal is that in the Church porch, under the tower, of John Whitson Esq. twice mayor, alderman and four times member in Parliament for this City, to which he was a great benefactor. Under a circular arch is his statue in a recumbent posture, and over it, an account of his various benefactions.

St. PAUL's Church, Portland-square: The parish of St. James being very large, and the buildings rapidly increasing, the parochial parochial Church has been long infufficient to contain the inhabitants; and an Act of Parliament was procured to divide the parish, and to erect a new parish Church, dedicated to St. Paul. was founded April 1789, is now completely built and is an elegant ftructure of stone in the gothic stile. From the door under the tower to the altar, its length is 105 feet, breadth 60. The roof is supported by lofty pillars of stone with rich capitals, and beautifully arched and flucco'd over the middle aile. It has spacious galleries on three fides, and the pulpit in the middle aile at the entrance of the Chancel. The steeple confists of a square tower (for which to bells are preparing) and two square stages proportionably less, crowned with an octangular pinnacle and vane; it very much resembles that of the Royal Exchange, London, and is 160 feet high. The organ is not yet put up, nor the internal part quite finished.

St. PETER and Pauls-church in Peter-street, a very ancient structure, founded before the Norman conquest, and mentioned in a deed so early as 1130; has been often repaired, particularly in 1749, at a great expence. It is now, internally, a spacious and beautiful Church of 3 ailes, the middle 111 feet long and the two others 96 feet each. The roof 36 feet high is supported by gothic pillars and arches and the breadth is 54 feet. It has a noble gilded organ, in a mahogany case, and some superb ancient monuments; one is within a gothic arch, adorned with a deal of curious workmanship, and various arms without any inscription; on a tomb is the sigure of a lady sinely carved, who was of the samily of the Newtons of Barrs-court. The tower is square, 80 feet high, very large, built of rag stone, with battlements and pinnacles of free-stone, has a spindle in the middle which supports a cock, a good peal of eight bells, and a clock and dial. The tenor sounds the hour.

In this Church-yard was interred Richard Sawage, son of the Earl of Rivers, a great genius, a good poet, but a very imprudent, and therefore an unhappy man. The calamities which he is said to have suffered, and the cruelty of his mother, the Countess of Maccelessield, were not so inimical to him, nor could they injure him so much as his own superfluous indulgencies and egregious indiscretions. Being arrested in Bristol and confined for a debt, he wreaked his vengeance on the Town, in a poem entitled, "London and Bristol delineated." He died in Newgate and was burried at the expence of the Goaler.

St. PHILIP and JACOB's Church, in its Church-yard near the Old-market, is very ancient, being mentioned in Gaunts deeds, as parochial before 1200. It feems to have been built at different times, but the present Church is large and spacious, consisting of a body, fide ailes and chancel, the whole 126 feet in length, and about 60 in breadth. It has galleries and several handsome monuments; at the upper end of the northern aile is a human figure of stone in a praying posture, which, (Barrett was of opinion) is the figure of Duke Robert eldest fon of William the Conqueror, reanoved from the Church of the Castle to this. It is certain from the Saxon Chronicle, that Robert was in 1126 brought to Briftol, and confined in the Castle, before he was sent to Cardiff Castle, where he died. This Church is ornamented with battlements and a handsome portico of stone; a good western front, and a square tower with three small pinnacles and a larger over the stair-case, to the cock of which the height is about 95 feet. In the tower is a good found peal of 8 bells, a clock, and dial in the front, the hour is firuck on a bell elevated on the leads, on account of the great extent of the in and out parish, which is the largest in Bristol, and greater than feveral English Cities.

In 1751 an act was passed for dividing this parish, and for building a new Church in Kingswood, which was begun 1752, completed and dedicated to St. George. This is a handsome building of stone, in a modern stile, with 3 ailes and a losty square tower, and is one mile and a half from Bristol in the upper Bath road. The living is in the gift of the Corporation. The colliers of the forest, were 40 or 50 years ago, so barbarous and savage, that they were a terror to the City of Bristol, which they several times invaded; it was dangerous to go among them, and their dialect was the roughest and rudest in the Nation; but by the labours of Mess. Whitestield and Wesley, by the crection of a parish Church and some meeting-houses, and the establishment of several funday and daily schools they are much civilized and improved in principles, morals and pronunciation.

St. STEPHEN's Church, Clare-street, was mentioned in old deeds in 1304. The tower was erected about 1470 by John Shipward a merchant and mayor of Bristol, is square, 140 feet high, has 177 stone steps up to the top, a sonorous peal of 8 bells, a clock and dial. This lofty tower is finely proportioned, and ornamented: finished with 4 pinnacles and battlements of hollow work so light and elegant, that Spectators are always struck with its beauty. and Connoisseurs approve it, as one of the most elaborate specimens of the florid gothic in England. The pinnacle over the stair-cate is circular and contains a bell that announces the hour. The middle aile of the Church is 88 feet long and above 50 high: the fouthern aile 88 feet long, and the northern only 60 feet; the height of the fide ailes 25 feet, and the breadth of the whole 56 feet. The pulpit, richly carved and decorated with cherubs heads, the altar, adorned with 8 fluted corinthian pillars, and all the pews pews and internal doors are of fine mahogany. Over the communion table is painted a dove, for the Holy Ghost; and above that is a fine large painting representing Angels lifting up a veil, and discovering the Glory of Heaven; done by the late Ross of Bath. The monuments are worthy of attention; the principal is that of Sir George Snigge Knt. of this City, serjant at law and one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

TEMPLE or Holy Cross Church, thus nominated from the Knights Templars, who wore a white habit with a red cross upon the left shoulder, and by whom it was founded in the reign of King Stephen, about the year 1145. This Church feems to have been built at different times, is spacious and lofty, and after Redcliff-church the largest in Bristol. There is an elegant gilded organ on a gallery over the western door; and the long ailes, large windows and arches, lofty cieling, flender pillars, and light open area, have a pleafing effect on spectators. The altar is rich, and adorned with four fine paintings, of Mofes and his rod, Aaron in his robes, and Peter and Paul, in carved and gilded frames. There are several ancient brasses, inscriptions, and modern monuments in this Church which brevity obliges us to omit. It has ? ailes, and is from East to West 159 feet, and 59 wide, the middle aile is 50 feet high. But one of the greatest curiofities of Bristol, is the leaning tower of Temple, the foundation of which has fo funk, that it is widely seperated from the wall of the Church, and so impends at the fouth-west corner as to appear ready to tumble down. It is a venerable monument of antiquity; and though fo lofty as 112 feet (ending in a plain cornice, without rail, battlement or pinnacle) contains a good peal of 8 bells, which are commonly rung, and on which the quarters and hour are flruck, and chimes played at 4, 8 and 12: it is faid that when thefe are rung in full peal, if a bason full of water be put on the leads of the tower, it will foon be emptied by the vibration of this apparently precarious yet permanent ftructure. The best place in which to view this tower is about the middle of Church-lane, by the Church-yard wall.

St. THOMAS Church, St. Thomas-street, was mentioned in deeds so early as 1200, and was, next to Redcliff, the most elegant gothic Church in the City, and equalled by very few. It has, on account of its great age, been lately taken down, and rebuilt in a modern and beautiful stile by Mr. Allen an ingenious Architect of Bristol. The internal part is not yet quite shished; its present length is 120 feet and breadth 58. The roof of the middle alle is losty, and has a series of windows on each side, above the side ailes. The organ, its gallery, the altar-piece and other decorations of this Church are superb and elegant, and the monuments various and handsome. The ancient tower being judged strong enough, is left; it is targe, fquare; built of hewn flone, has railing on the top, a gilded cock highly elevated from the middle, and contains a deep, grand old peal of eight bells, on the tenor of which is flruck the hour. The parishioners intend to have the tower raised, and modernized.

St. WERBURGH's Church, Corn-ftreet. To this Saint are also dedicated the Cathedral of Chefter, and a parish Church in Dublin. St. Werburga was the daughter of Wulpherus, King of the Mercians, who after living immaculate with her husband Ceolredus for three years, took the veil. History relates that the Abbey out of which the See of Cheffer was formed, had been originally a Nunnery, founded about the year 660 by the above King, in favour of his daughter's indisposition to a married life. + The original Church here was founded about 1190 and the present tower built 1385; the Church being very old and much decayed, was taken down, rebuilt in the gothic stile, and opened 1761. It has a very good freestone front, with large gothic windows suitable to the tower, which was preserved, and only the top of it altered and repaired. The present structure has three ailes, each 72 feet long, their breadth in the clear is 58 feet; the height of the middle aile which is arched, is 26 feet, and of the two others 22 feet, the roofs are supported by fluted gothic pillars and arches. The Altar-piece and Church are beautifully painted and ornamented; there are feveral monuments, among which is that of Nicholas Thorne, an eminent merchant of Bristol, who founded the City grammar fehool, The tower, a neat gothic building, confifts of 4 and died 1546. flages, well ornamented, which are 80 feet high, crowned with a battlement of hollow work, and 3 folid pinnacles, but over the stair-case, which projects circularly at one corner, and contains 160 steps, there is a larger pinnacle of hollow work, twenty feet to the vane, which makes the whole 100 feet high; the upper stage contains a peal of 6 bells.

At the Cathedral a sermon is preached every Sunday morning, service begins at 11 o'clock, and there are prayers in the evening at 5. At St. Augustines the neighbouring parish Church, there are prayers in the morning, and a sermon in the asternoon. At St. Marks, service and a sermon only in the forenoon, beginning about half after 11 o'clock. At all the other Churches, there are service and sermons in the forenoon at half after 10 o'clock, (excepting St. James at 11,) and at 3 in the asternoon. There are lecture sermons at Maryport every Wednesday at 11, at St. Nicholas's Tuesday and at St. John's Thursday, each at about 4 in the afternoon. Most of the Churches have good organs, and there are 124 bells, in the various steeples that are rung in peal, besides several for other uses, in all 150. The Chapels of the establishment are sive.

DOWRY SQUARE CHAPEL, for the use of the Nobility and Gentry resorting to and residing at the Hotwells, was built and is supported by their voluntary subscriptions. This is a plain building, has within it columns of freessone which support the roof, a pulpit, and benches for the audience. In the season the congregation here is by far the most genteel and brilliant in the whole Town. There is an elegant monument worthy of notice, on which is the following inscription:

Near this place are deposited the remains of SARAH STON-HOUSE, the second wife of JAMES STONHOUSE, M. D. more than twenty years Physician to the Northampton Insirmary, and afterwards rector of Great and Little Chewerel, Wiltshire,

Come, refignation, wipe the human tear,
Domestic anguish drops o'er virtue's bier;
Bid selfish forrow hush the sond complaint,
Nor from the God she lov'd detain the Saint.
Truth, meekness, patience, honour'd shade! were thine,
And holy hope, and charity divine:
Tho' these thy forseit being could not save,
Thy faith subdu'd the terrors of the grave.
Oh! if thy living excellence could teach,
Death has a lostier emphasis of speech:
In death, thy last, best lesson shill impart,
And write, prepare to die, on every heart.

HANNAH MORE.

She died December 10, 1788, aged 55 years.

BE SERIOUS.

Sir Francis Walfyngham, Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth, when fome of his vifitors who were gay and frolickfome, observed to him that "he was serious," he replied, "life is serious, death is serious, time is serious, eternity is serious, heaven and hell are serious, how then should I be gay?

Arebias, a Lacedemonian, while at a Banquet, received a letter, to inform him of a design to assassinate him, which the messenger intreated him to read immediately, as it was on ferious business: he replied "Pros aurion spoudaia" ferious things to-morrow, but he never lived to see to-morrow, for that night he was slain.

Serious confideration of the duties, circumstances, and uncertainty of human life is the indispensible mental exercise of every rational creature; but there is a time for all things, a time to weep and a time to laugh. A good man is chearful at proper times, as well as serious, and rejoices as well as mourns; and none has such valid reason to be joyful and happy as the man who lives a righteous life. Therefore this injunction should be understood with some restrictions. For if religion be represented as consisting entirely of seriousness, artful, designing persons may feign it, to acquire the character of sanctivey (as many have done,) and to carry on successfully their interested purposes. There may be serious hypocrites, serious cheats, and theives, nay serious persecutors and murderers. Let not seriousness be esteemed the criterion of a religious character; men must be known by their actions and conversation in public and in private. The man who is pious and grateful to the Divine Being, and evinces that the leading endeavours of his life are to become good and to do good, he is only in the right way, and all others are wrong, whatever may be their faith, pretensions or expectations. All who decive themselves with any thing short of doing their duty, may at the close of life, be ready to exclaim with Gressius, "Vitam perdidi opercose inihi agendo," I bave loss my life in laboriously doing nothing; or with the late Mr. Henderson, Student at Oxford, "I grieve for time missent, and talents misapplied!"

FOSTER's CHAPEL, dedicated to the three Kings of Cologn, was founded by John Foster in 1504, who had been mayor in 1481, and is situated in Steep-street, St. Michael's, the rector of which parish is paid by the Chamberlain of Bristol £10. per annum for prayers, and a monthly sermon to be preached in this Chapel.

COLSTONS CHAPEL St. Michaels-bill. Here are prayers read by a clergyman every morning and afternoon, except when there is service at St. Michaels.

NEWGATE CHAPEL is decent and convenient, has galleries on three fides; the ordinary, appointed by the Corporation, has a handsome salary for performing divine service in it.

TRINITY CHAPEL, Lawfords-place. This and the Hospital were founded by John Barstaple, merchant and magistrate of Bristol in 1416. The vicar of St. Philips hath 18. per annum to read prayers here every Thursday and Saturday for ever, and for a sermon and sacrament on Holy Thursday; this Chapel is adorned with a sine monument of the sounder and his wife. As this building projects inconveniently into the passage between the Old-market and West-street, it is the general wish that the Corporation would remove it, to the full breadth of the Old-market, and esseet a spacious, unobstructed entrance into the City. There are also places of worship for all the denominations in England that are popular and prevalent; whose adherents live in harmony, if not charity; who meet and mix without malevolence, and occasionally lend an ear to each others preachers.

1. The Chapel or meeting-bouse for Unitarians, in Lewins-mead, lately rebuilt, is a large, elegant and costly place of worship, with a fine freestone front, which has a rustic basement, a semicircular portico supported by Ionic columns, and the whole crowned with a bold and lofty pediment.

2. Bridge-street chapel or meeting-bouse, with a freestone front in the gothic stile, has four losty columns to support the roof, and is very handsome.

3. Castle-green meeting for Calvinists, is losty, elegant and roomy, has a circular dome in the cieling, and the pulpit, feats and galleries of mahogany. 4. Temple-street chapel, an old gothic foundation, used for a culvinistic or independent meeting. 5. Broad-mead or Hay-market meeting, 2 handsome modern edifice, with 6 large pillars of stone supporting galleries and roof. This is for Baptists, as is also, 6, The Pithay meeting, which has been lately rebuilt, is spacious and beautiful. 7. The meeting-house of the FRIENDS in Quakers-friers, Rosemarystreet. This is a roomy, and truly elegant house, the roof and galleries are supported by large freestone pillars. 8. The Friends' meeting-house over the Bridge Temple-street, is square and neat, with 3 galleries. 9. The Tabernacle of the late Mr. Whitefield, in Penn-freet, Old Orchard, is a large, light and convenient place of worship, with eight pillars of stone supporting the galleries and roof. 10. The principal chapel of the late Mr. Wesley's society, commonly called Welley's-room in Broad-mead, is a spacious meeting house with 6 freestone pillars supporting galleries and a complete dwelling house over the chapel. 11. Guinea-Breet chapel, in Mr. Wefley's connection, to the fouth of Bristol-bridge, has two galleries and is very neat and decent. 12. Portland-freet chapel, Kingsdown, is spacious and handsome, has a large gallery, a turret with a bell, and the service of the Church of England read by preachers in Mr. Wesley's connection. 13. Chapel in George'sstreet beyond Lawfords-place, belonging to the same society. Lady Huntingdon's chapel, St. Augustines-place, fitted up in the stile of the other chapels founded by that lady. 15. Hope-chapel, Albermarle-row, a regular modern gothic building, founded by the Countess of Glenorchy and Lady Hope, who have marble monuments in it. Service in much the same stile as at Lady Huntingdons. 16. Orchard-street chapel for French Protestants, a neat building, in which divine service is performed every Sunday in French. 17. The Roman catholic chapel, Trenchard-lane, a spacious gothic building, erected by contributions of Papists and Protestants. 18. A Moravian chapel, Upper Maudlin-lane. A neat structure with rusticated windows, and a gallery within, that contains a good organ. 19. The New Jerusalem Church, St. James's-back; formerly the Romish chapel, but since much enlarged and improved, with the addition of a gallery and organ. 20. The Jews Synagogue in Temple-street, very well fitted up, painted and furnished with altarpiece, branches, candlesticks &c. in such a stile, that though it is not one of the largest, it is one of the most beautiful places of worship in Bristol.

Gloria in supremis Deo, in terra pax, erga homines benevelentia.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the other Public buildings.

HE EXCHANGE, Corn-street, built by Mr. Wood Architect of Bath, cost £50,000. and was opened 1743. This is a very beautiful and elegant structure, 110 feet in front and 148 in depth; the whole building infide and outfide is of freeftone. The principal front is upon a bold ruftic basement, the central part of which breaks forward, and makes a tetraftyle of almost whole columns, with corinthian capitals supporting a pediment, in the tympan of which are the King's arms carved in stone. The spaces between the capitals of the columns and pillasters of the front, are filled with festoons which represent Great Britain and the four quarters of the world, with their product and manufactures. The fouthern front is to the general market, confifts of a ruftic arcade, the superstructure of which has a central projection that supports a pediment containing the arms of the City, on which is a turret, with a clock and dial for the market. The place for the merchants is a periffile of the corinthian order go feet by 80, and capable of containing 1440 persons. It is open every week day from 11 till half after 2.

The POST-OFFICE is a handfome and convenient building of freeftone, near to the western end of the Exchange, to which it is a wing, projecting forward into the Street; and there is another fimilar to it at the eastern end.

The COUNCIL HOUSE, Corn-firest or at the Tolzey, is a building of stone with niches in the front, erected 1703, but much too small for the City. It has a common hall on a level with the Street, a part of which is inclosed for the mayor or some of the aldermen, who attend here daily from 12 to 3 to administer justice. In the Council chambers over this are several sine portraits and pictures, in particular, of the Earl of Pembroke, high Steward of Bristol, a whole length; another of Lord Clare, and many others. Here are the Town-clerks and chamberlains offices; and the mayor, aldermen and common-council meet to transact the public business.

The GUILDHALL is an ancient, gothic structure, in Broadfirect. Its front has been modernized, but bears the arms of King Edward the 1st. over which in a niche is a Statue of King Charles the second; on the southern side of which are the windows of the Hall, and on the northern the large gothic window of St. George'schapel, where the mayor and sheriffs are annually elected on the 15th of September. The Hall is large and losty, 69 feet in front, has every convenience for Courts, and galleries for spectators at each end. Here are held, the general goal delivery, court of Nist prius, quarter sessions, the sherists courts, court of conscience, and elections for Members.
M each

The MERCHANTS HALL, Princes-street, was built of freestone in 1701, but has lately been almost rebuilt, the front entirely, with great improvements. The access to the principal door is by a flight of fleps, on each fide of the door in a niche is a large vafe. on both of which are carved the merchants arms; over the door, in a niche, is a bust of the present King George the 3d. said to be a good likeness. The lobby leads into a lofty saloon, decorated (at the upper end) with a large mirror in a richly gilded frame, and with two glass lustres, suspended from the cieling by gilded chains. On the North of this faloon is the opening into the principal room. These may be occasionally seperated by folding glass doors fitted to a lofty arch embellished with carving. This room has (suspended by gilded chains) four beautiful glass lustres, which, with the others, cost £,550. Over the chimney the merchants arms with supporters are carved and blazoned. is here a half length painting of Edward Colfton Esq. said to have been a strong resemblance; from this picture Rysbrack modelled a likeness of his face for his statue in All Saints-church.

The COOPERS HALL, King-street, built from a design of the late Halfpenny, Architect, is a very noble freestone edifice; the front stands on a low, russic basement, and is ornamented with four superb columns, with corinthian capitals, that support an attic story and losty pediment, on which are the arms of the Company. The principal room is large and losty, with chandeliers and a music gallery.

The CUSTOM HOUSE at the centre of the northern fide of Queen's-fquare, is a commodious stately building of brick, with a colonade of freestone pillars with Ionic capitals in the front. The large room in which the principal business of this port is transacted is 90 feet long and of breadth and height proportionable.

The CITY LIBRARY, King-street, is a handsome freestone building; contains a copious and excellent collection of ancient and modern authors, which are perpetually increasing by donations and annual subscriptions. The Librarian must always be a clergyman, who has a Sub-librarian to affish him, Mr. Catcott, late vicar of Temple in this City, having bequeathed to this library his whole nusurum of minerals, fossils, and natural curiosities, with a valuable collection of books, a new wing of freestone is added for their reception.

The ASSEMBLY ROOM, Princes-street, has a beautiful front of freestone, which consists of a rustic basement, supporting four double columns of the corinthian order, crowned by an open 1ediment;

diment; on the frieze in relief is this sentence,

Curas Cithara tollit. Music dispells Care.

The room for Balls and Concerts is 90 feet long, and a lofty highly finished receptacle. It has three elegant glass lustres, that in the middle is very large and brilliant; mirrors in carved frames; but above all, a most superb orchestra sitted up with great taste, and a capital organ with gilded pipes. The drawing room is adjacent, and underneath that is a public cossee -100m. There are Assemblies here every other. Thursday during the winter also on the King and Queen's birth-days, and other particular occasions, which are conducted by a committee of gentlemen of this City, who have appointed James Russell Esq. Master of the Ceremonies, who has a Ball annually.

The following are the prefent Rules, viz.

That the Assembly shall be supported by a subscription of two guineas from each subscriber, to be paid to the Treasurer at the first opening thereof.

That the admission of every new subscriber shall be by the confent of a majority of the committee.

That no gentleman inhabitant of the City or the environs shall be admitted to the Assembly without becoming a subscriber.

That non-residents shall pay sive shillings for each night's admission.

That all officers in his Majesty's service, who are not subsoribers, be admitted as non-residents, paying five shillings each night of admission.

That every fubscriber be entitled to two ladies' tickets.

That the minuets begin at half past fix o'clock, and end at eight, when country dances are to commence.

That no children in frocks be admitted to dance minuets.

That in country dances the ladies shall draw for their places, which shall be claimed, and taken in the first dance, or lose the benefit thereof.

That in country dances the Master of the Ceremonies shall have the privilege of complimenting three ladies, being strangers, with the three first places.

That ladies changing partners shall maintain their respective places, but not the gentlemen.

That any lady, who has not drawn for places coming into a fet, shall go to the bottom.

That the top couple, after calling one dance, shall retire to the

That every couple going down with a dance will be expected to go up the fame.

That

If it is thought necessary by the Master of the Ceremonies to have two sets at country dances, every second couple to be drawn off into another set.

That ladies shall not be admitted in hats.

That the balls be once a fortnight, and continue till the sub-fcription money be expended.

That at eleven o'clock all dancing shall cease, and the musicians retire at the signal of the Master of the Ceremonies, excepting on his benefit, or any public night, when the time of breaking-up is left to his own difference.

That all expences be paid out of the subscription-money, and the number of Assemblies be determined acording as there shall be a sufficiency in the hands of the Treasurer for their support.

That whatever money may be taken for the admission of nonfubscribers, shall be laid out at the end of the season in a cotillion

Ball.

That in cafe of any breach of these regulations, complaint shall be made to the Master of the Ceremonies, whose authority will be supported by every member of the society.

That Mr. Ruffel be continued Master of the Ceremonies on the usual plan; that he provide six good musicians to compose the band; and that he be attentive to these regulations, and such others as the Committee shall judge necessary to superadd.

That these rules be printed, and a copy of them sent to every fubscriber.

Here are also public concerts during the winter, under the conduct of a committee of gentlemen, who take care to engage the best vocal and instrumental performers. The subscribers pay two guineas each, and are entitled to two tickets for the admission of ladies. Gentlemen living in Bristol, or its vicinity, are not admitted, unless they become subscribers. Non-residents pay five shillings for their admission.

The THEATRE ROYAL, King-street, is a perfect model of elegance and convenience: the internal part round the pit is semi-circular, and the whole decorated with carving, gilding and painting. The late Mr. Garrick who surveyed it before it was quite simished, pronounced it to be the most complete in Europe of its dimensions; and wrote a prologue and epilogue, which were pronounced by Powell and Arthur when it was opened, May 30, 1765. The scenes were painted by the late Mr. French, and are done in a masterly stile. The theatrical performances here, are little (if any) inserior to those in London.

The MANSION HOUSE, Queen-square, is a decent building of brick, but has nothing extraordinary to recommend it to notice. There has been added to it a large, elegant hall or banquettingroom; and it is hoped that as the magistracy have added a ball, to their bouse, they will in due time add a bouse to their ball. Every mayor refides in this house during the year of his office.

The EXCISE OFFICE, at the north-west corner of the same square, is a plain but good house of brick appropriated to the business of the Excise; in which all matters relative to the Excise duties in the port of Bristol are regularly transacted, by a collector and various other officers.

The Merchant Taylors have an elegant HALL near Broad-street, built of freestone, 70 feet long and of proportionable breadth. This has a music gallery, chandeliers and other conveniences, and is let out for public meetings, feafts and exhibitions.

CHAP. XIV.

This has two masters both clergymen of the Church of England. The principal master dwells in the house and the affistant has an allowance for a house, each have handfome falaries: the school has two fellowships, of thirty pounds a year each, at St. John's-college, Oxford; two exhibitions of ten pounds a year each, two others of fix, and one of II. To these we add with sincere pleasure, no less than fourteen Benevolent-schools in the parishes of St. James and St. Paul, in which about 450 poor boys and girls are daily taught reading, fewing, &c. clothed for divine worthip once a year, and conducted by the masters and mistresses every Sunday to St. James's-church. The good sense and benevolence of Dr. Small and the gentry of the parish have made this great and obvious improvement on Sunday-schools, which redounds to their honor, and for which they justly merit the thanks of the public. A daily school of a similar institution has been established for the parishes of St. Michael and St. Austin. are also Sunday-schools in most of the other parishes, and several in St. George's parish in Kingsavood among the Colliers. A MARINE fociety has been established for some years, for educating poor boys for the sea service. They are situated in convenient buildings in Castle-green, taught reading, writing &c. and conducted every Sunday to St. Philips-church. The present number seems to be about 60 or 70.

The Hospitals, Almsbouses and charitable institutions are so humerous, that we must content ourselves with little more than announcing them. 1. St. Peters-hospital in St. Peter's-sfreet, is the general holpital for the poor of the whole City, including superannuated persons, orphans, and ideots; and it has a ward for lunatics. Vagrants and beggars are taken up and fent hither. The building is ancient and very spacious, and was the mansion of Thomas Norton Efq. M. P. for Briftol in 1399: afterwards, the Mint for coinage of money, which is now its most general title, and in the 8th of William 3d erected into the City hospital, with a governor, deputy, treasurer, guardians, physician, apothecary, chaplain and other officers. It is supported by an annual affessment on the parishes of Bristol, for the total amount of which, fee page 39. 2. Briftol Infirmary, Marlborough-street, St. James's, has been lately rebuilding on a more extensive scale than heretofore. The main body and northern wings are completed, and are spacious and lofty; it is hoped that the spirit and tried benevolence of the opulent Citizens of Bristol, will soon enable the trustees to erect the fouthern wing, which will complete the building and render it an ample receptacle for diforders and cafualties. This is a most excellent, liberal and unlimited institution: all perfons, without regard to country, colour or dialect, who are accidentally injured, are on application immediately admitted, without any recommendation whatfoever: and all persons of Town or Country, labouring under aoute or chronical disorders, by a note from a subscriber are admitted on Mondays and Thursdays. This charity is supported by annual subscriptions and donations; and as considerable sums are paid towards it, there is no doubt that the trustees and visitors will take very particular care that they are not deceived in the application and expenditure of the public money, and in the treatment of, and provision for the patients, for whose use the charity was instituted. This is now the principal City or County Infirmary in the West of England, has generally about 150 in-patients, and affifts numerous out-patients with advice and medicine. It has feveral physicians, furgeons; a resident apothecary, and a chaplain who reads prayers in the feveral wards. 3. The Magdalen hospital, for deluded common women who wish to reform, lately established at Hooks-mills, about a quarter of a mile from the end of Wilder-street, St. Pauls, in a pleasant and healthy situation, where a neat chapel has been erected, and a chaplain appointed for performing public divine fervice every Sunday at II o'clock in the forenoon, and also at 6 in the evening during the summer. 4. Merchants-hospital, King-street, for 19 seamen and 12 seamen's widows. 5. Colftons almshouse, St. Michaels-hill, for 12 men and 12 women, a handsome spacious building of freestone, with a chapel in the centre. 6. Trinity hospital; Old-market, for 22 persons above 50 years old. 7. St. Nicholas almshouse, King-street, for 16 elderly women. 8. Fosters almshouse, Steep-street, St. Michaels, for 7 men and 7 women upwards of 50 years of age. 9. Alderman Stephens's almshouse, Old-market, for 16 freemens widows or daughters. 10. Alderman Stephens's hospital, Temple-street, for 12 women of 60 years old, widows or daughters of freemen. 11. Merchant Taylors bospital, Merchant-Areet, for 9 persons. 12. Ridleys hospital, Milk-street, for 10 old batchelors and maids, a near building of freestone. 13. Strange's, or St. John's-almshouse, Tower-lane-steps, for 13 old women. 14. All-saints almshouse, Tower-lane-steps, for 8 old women. 15. Burton's almshouse, Long-row, for 16 widows. 16. Presbyterian alms-house, Stokescroft, for 12 women. This with the school, form a spacious, decent building. 17. Dr. White's hospital, Temple-street, for 6 men and 6 women. 18. St. James's poor-house, Barrs-street, for 12 women. 19. Spencer's almshouse, Lewins-mead, for 12 persons upwards of 50 years old. 20. Gift-boufe, St. James's-back, for 6 widows or maidens. 21. Poor-house, St. James's-back. 22. Tucker's-hall, Temple-street, for 6 old men or women. 23. Weaver's-hall, Temple-street, for 4 widows of weavers. 24. Baptist poor-house, Milk-street, for 5 old women. 25. Baptist poor-house, Redcrois-street, for a aged persons. 26. Redcliff poor-house, called, Roger Magdalens of Nisnney, without Temple-gate, for 8 women and 8 men .. 27. Redeliff-hill almshouse, founded by Mr. Canynges, for 14 persons. 28. House of mercy, Colstons-parade, founded by the late Mr. William Fry, for 12 widows. 29. St. Philips avorkboule, bouse, Pennywell-lane, a neat and spacious building. 30. The work-house, of the FRIENDS, New-street, a handsome edifice. 31. Asslum for the blind, Callowhill-street, supported by voluntary subscription; a benevolent and praise-worthy institution! may it have ample encouragement from those who can clearly see, corporeally, and discern mentally its unspeakable propriety, and probable utility. Let the following old stanza excite those to gratitude and generosity, who are in full possession of all their senses, and of a plenitude of the good things of this life.

I, fee blind people, with my eyes,
To Hospitals I walk,
I hear of them that cannot hear,
And of the dumb, I talk.

To all these exhibitions we must add, the Disfensary for lying-in women, supported by voluntary subscription: an annual subscription for the discharge of debtors confined in Newgate: subscriptions for the recovery of persons apparently drowned; and for the relief of strangers: the several annual seasts; viz. of the clergy: of the nobility and gentry, natives of the County of Glocester, of the gentlemen of the anchor, dolphin, and grateful societies; at all of which, very considerable sums are collected for various charitable purposes, and faithfully applied; to the honor of the merchants, gentry, clergy, and opulent Citizens of Bristol, who know the way to their pockets, and have hearts and hands ready to compassionate the distressed, and to administer all necessary and suitable assistance.

Most of the hospitals and almshouses are so liberally endowed, as entirely to provide for and maintain their inhabitants; and to all of them there are annexed some donations or emoluments that alleviate the burdens of life, and afford relief and comfort in declining years. But for the particulars of endowments &c. we refer our readers to a publication printed for T. Mills, Bookseller, in Corn-street, which may be had of him or the other booksellers,

We flould not forget the numerous and respectable society of the Captains of Ships, who meet together in autumn at the Bush Tavern, and go in procession to the Cathedral to attend divine service and a sermon, then proceed to some public hall to dinner, and afterwards subscribe liberally to the support of a fund for the maintenance of the widows of any of their deceased members. This society sourishes and increases in opulence, is properly adapted to the precariousness of the lives of seamen, and sound of great utility to surviving widows and their families.

This City has a long lift of benefactors to boaft of, who have left large fums of money, or estates in land to charitable uses. The Corporation of Bristol have, to their honor, recorded them all in a book, open to the inspection of the whole body, where the wills are all inferted, the lands described which are allotted for their support, and their ends ascertained, so that nothing but wilful inattention and neglect can ever occasion their being misapplied or Barrett in his history gives a long list of donations to the City in lands and money, which are to a vast amount, but too numerous to infert in a work of this limitation.

CHAP. XVI.

Various miscellaneous particulars concerning Briffol.

PRISTOL was a Borough at the Conquest, and very early sent D two burgesses to Parliament by ancient prescription. A list of its representatives is extant from the 23d of Edward the 1st, 1205. None can vote for members but those who are freemen by birth, freehold, fervitude, purchase, donation, or by marrying a freeman's daughter. The number of freemen is from 7 to 8000. The present representatives are the Marquis of Worcester, and Lord Sheffield.

Bristol is dignified with the title of Earldom. The present Earl 15 a clergyman ; the right Rev. Frederick Hervey, Lord Hervey, D. D. Bishop of Derry in Ireland.

Strangers who shall be desirous to view the City from the adjacent hills, may be recommended to Brandon hill, a pleasant, lofty conic eminence or mount, about 250 feet in perpendicular height from its base, from which it rises almost to a point, and is partly covered with verdure and some bushes on which the neighbouring laundresses dry their linen. It is named from a chapel dedicated to Saint Brendanus, which formerly stood on its summit; and affords those who mount it a beautiful view of part of Briftol, (a great part being intercepted by St. Michaels hill) and of the country for many miles round, particularly of Lansdown, some buildings of Bath, Dundry hill and tower, beautiful village of Clifton, Leigh and Durdham downs, the Welch mountains beyond the great River Severn; Kingswood; and the River Awon at the foot of the hill. This hill appears to be a rock covered with a thin stratum of earth, which in some places is desicient and leaves the stones quite bare. The rock is valued by artists for grinding colours or hard substances, for which there is not any stone known to be superior to it. In the civil wars the top of this hill was for-N tified tified by the monarchical army, against the Parliament of England, and part of the trenches yet remain. On the southern side towards the hottom is a neat and pleusant path that leads to Clifton. Near this is a row of decent houses lately built and named the Queen's parade, the eastern side of the hill is covered with new and elegant buildings as already noticed, which we hope will soon be protracted to Clifton.

There is a beautiful view of Bristol and the country from Montpelier, which is fituated to the North, not half a mile from Stokescroft turnpike. Totterdown, and Pile hills without Temple-gate, and Windmill hill near Bedminster church, command various and pleasing prospects of the City and Clifton: from Bedminster down and the adjacent fields, there are uninterrupted views of the whole collection and extent of buildings from Vincents rocks west, through Clifton and all over Bristol to its eastern extremity. In the apertures between the buildings in Horsield lane, St. Michaels; and on Kingsdown to the end of Somerfet street, Ninetree-hill, are views of the considerable extent of the eastern part of the Town, and of the adjacent Country and villages.

In Briffol there are people of feveral different countries, languages and religions: it receives large colonies from Wales, Ireland, Scotland, America, Glocestershire, Somersetshire, Devonthire and most parts of England and the world, fo that a general characteristic of its inhabitants cannot be given. The gentry, merchants, capital traders and medical men are generous, live well, keep clegant carriages and country houses. The ladies, gentlemen, and decent ranks in Bristol dress fashionably, having Bath almost at their gates, and a great refort of nobility and gentry to the Hotwell. Literature and genteel education are more cultivated here than ever, and there are circulating Libraries in various parts of the Town. The natives pronounce English better than the people of any other part of the West of England, though alley retain a few peculiarities of Glocester and Somersetshires. Polite, well bred and well informed people pronounce with propriety; and propie of different parts of the Town pronounce differently. The languages spoken commonly, are English, Welch and Irish; and there is every dialect of English used here that is known in England The shopkeepers are active, industrious, obliging, upright and punctual, and generally fell as cheaply as they can. The lowest classes are sharp, witty, droll, faucy, profligate and fraudulent. The common women are numerous, of all dreffes, ranks and prices, and nocturnally perambulate as in London. The populace are apt to collect in mobs on the flightest occasions; but have been feldom so spirited as in the late transactions on Bristol-bridge, (October 1793) where they twice burned burned the toll-gates and posts, resisted the magistracy and military, prevented the taking of the toll, and at the risque and with the unhappy and lamented loss of several of their lives and limbs (which should, if possible, have been spared,) have perhaps for ever abolished this (now) obnoxious taxation.

The principal coffee-houses are, the Exchange, and opposite it Jacks coffee-house; the British in Broad-street, and the Assembly coffee-house on the Key. Though there are many taverns in all parts of the Town, the principal are the Bush in Corn-street, and the Rummer in Exchange-alley. Travellers of quality, and gentry generally put up at the Bush, which is an inn as well as a tavern, and has excellent accommodations: or at the White-lion and White-bart inns in Broad-street, the principal inns in the City.

There are 5 newspapers printed here weekly. The Bristol Mercury is published on Monday morning by Bulgin and Rosser, Broadstreet; the Bristol Gazette, on Wednesday evening by Pine in Wine-street; on Saturday morning are published Sarah Farley's Journal by Routh and Co. Bridge-street; Bonner and Middleton's Journal, by Bonner, Castle-green; and Felix Farley's Journal, by Rudhall, Small-street. A list of the Bankers may be found in the Directory.

There is every gratification and amusement in Bristol that a rational person can desire. They who are for pedestrian exercise have neat and convenient walks within, and superlatively pleasant and delightful walks without the Town. The equestrians have at their election the adjacent downs of Durdham and Leigh, the hills to Portishead, Walton and Clevedon in view of the Bristol channel, the delightful villages of Ashton, Leigh, Wraxal and Backwell on one fide, and of Kingsweston, (the feat of Lord Clifford) Westbury, Henbury, Almondsbury, Stapleton and Frenchay on another, to which we may add Briflington, Knowle, Dundry, and the New and Old Passages, excursions to which add greatly to the health and felicity of the inhabitants. They who are fond of the water, may make most pleasant yoyages up the River, or down to the channel fo low as the Flat-holmes, where there is a good house of entertainment. For the lovers of music and dancing there are the Affembly rooms and concerts. For the lovers of plays, the Theatre; for the literary, the circulating Libraries and bookfellers shops; for the athletic, the tennis-courts, and for those who are fond of bathing and fwimming, the spacious bath and dressing houses, pleasant gardens and good accommodations of Mr. Rennison, near to Stokes-croft turnpike; and the conveniences for bathing in the River Froom, at the Fox, Baptist-mills, about half a mile from Briftol. The various stages and hackney coaches will accommodate those persons or parties who are for a pleasant ride into N 2

the country; and they who are pleased with pulpit exhibitions need not go one day in the week unfatisfied.

Having already pointed out the principal antiquities and cuprofities of Bristol, the stranger will not be at a loss to find them; and it will be proper to make a few observations on the Statues of this City.

The equestrian statue of William the 3d. in Queen-square, deserves par icular attention. The King is habited as a Roman Gasar, his right arm is extended, and he points with a truncheon as if he were commanding. This is universally allowed by Consoisseurs to be the noblest equestrian statue in the Kingdom. It is thus described by H. Jones in his poem of Cliston.

What grand magnificence on Virtue grows,
What Squares, what Palaces of late arose,
How wealth, how taste in every pile appear,
With still improving grace from year to year!
Lo Queen's —— enrich'd by Rybrack's Roman hand;
See William's sinish'd form majestic stand;
His martial form express'd with attic force,
Erect, like Antonine's, his warlike horse;
With lofty elegance and grecian air,

To feast the well pleas'd eye, and fill the square.

The statue of Charles the 2d. in royal robes at the Guildhall, is in a good bold attitude, but wants a new globe and sceptre. The statues of the Kings Belinus and Brennus at St. John's gate, have a most antique and venerable appearance. On Temple-conduit, is a noble statue of Neptune cast in metal, who holds in the hand of one extended arm, a trident, and in the hand of the other the tail of a fish whose head is under one of his feet. There is a very decent statue of the founder or benefactor of Trinity-hospital. Old-market, in a niche at the upper end of the building. The statues on the northern fide of the College-gate, though ancient deserve notice. The two crowned Kings are for Henry the 2d. and King Stephen above him; on the other fide of the arch the lower statue is of R. Fitzharding the founder of the Church, the other is not known On the fouthern fide, the two lower statues are of the Abbots Newland and Elliote; one of the statues above, was for the Virgin and Child, the other is unknown. The statue of our Lady on Redcliff tower was well executed for the time, below is another of Jesus, and in a nook behind, fronting the east, another of the founder, Simon de Burton. These are best viewed from the top of the steps that lead to the northern porch.

Of all the ancient Crosses that were in Bristol, one only remains, Temple-cross, which, as it is not in the way, may remain much longer. It is oftangular, all of sone and is converted into a watch-

Sermons are not only preached in the regular places of worship in this City, but frequently given gratis in the streets, by inspired, and vociferous orators, who voluntarily expose themselves for the good of their fellow creatures. There is something remarkable in the observation of the Sabbath here. At nine o'clock in the morning, the tenor bells of all the parish Churches are risen and rung a knell for half an hour, and sallen: then the bells in each tower are chimed, for some time, which from about 20 Churches make a very solemn jingling; these are succeeded by small bells called ting tangs, which toll the people into Church. The same commences at 2 in the afternoon. The birth day of Mr. Colston, Nov. 13, that liberal donor to this City, is observed here with great ceremony; all the bells in the City are rung mussed, the whole night before that day, beginning at 12 o'clock, and so all the day; and various societies meet in honor of his memory.

The streets, squares, lanes and passages of this City are upwards of 500, and more than there are in any other City or Town in England; after our august metropolis this is the largest and most populous place in England, and one of the principal Cities of Europe.

CHAP. XVII.

Account of some eminent Persons and Authors, natives of Bristol.

SEBASTIAN CABOT, the discoverer of Newfoundland in 1498, was born in Bristol, of Genose parents. He was commissioned by Henry 7th, who ordered a Ship to be victualled and manned for him at Bristol to make American discovery: he found the inhabitants of the island clothed with the skins of beasts, and great plenty of bears who catched sish with their claws, King Edward the 6th, 1549, granted to this Sebastian, an annuity of £166 for his natural life, and appointed him grand pilot of England.

William of Worcester, priest of St. James's-parish, was born on St. James's-back, his father was a skinner and glover. In 1431 he was sent to Hartshall in Oxford. He is said to be the first who translated any of Cicero's works into English, which was his discourse on old age, presented by him to W. Wainsteet, Bishop of Winchester 1473, and he complains that his present was without any beneficial effect to himself. To him we are indebted for his latin notes on Bristol written about the year 1480, which contain particular descriptions of the churches, religious houses, streets, lanes and every thing worthy of notice in this City. His manuscript lay long hid in Bennet-college, Cambridge, but was decyphered and published by Mr. Nasmith in 1778.

William Camyages, a principal merchant and foreign trader, a friend and patron of learning and religion, a benefactor to the poor, and the repairer and finisher of Redcliff-church, was born in Bristol and was 5 years old at his father's death in 1405. His brother Thomas was then 10 years old, was afterward sent to London, became a grocer there, and served the office of Lord Mayor in 1456, the very year in which his brother William was mayor of Bristol, so that London and Bristol, the two principal trading Cities, had two brothers for mayors in the same year.

Robert Thorne, who founded and endowed the principal grammar-school in this City, was a native of it, and blessed with a plentiful fortune and with a liberal and benevolent mind.

Tobias Mathews, archbishop of York, was born on Bristol-bridge. He was a very noted, frequent and eloquent preacher. He kept an exact account of all the sermons he preached, by which it appears, that when dean of Durham he preached 721, when bishop of that diocese 550, and when archbishop 721, in all 1992. He presented to the Citizens of Bristol, many books towards forming a library, "for the use of the aldermen and shopkeepers," and died 1628.

Dr. William Thomas, bishop of Worcester, was the son of John Thomas, linen-draper on Bristol-bridge, and born 1613. He was educated at St. John's-college, Oxford, deprived of his living by the Parliament in 1644, and made bishop of Worcester in 1683. He refused to publish King James's declaration for liberty of confcience, and also to take the oaths to King William, and while preparing to leav ehis palace and bishoprick, died in the 76th year of his age.

Edward Colfion Esq. was born here 1636, lived in Small-Breet. where he was a very fuccefsful merchant, never infured a Ship and never loft one, and acquired a very large fortune, the principal part of which he expended in doing good. Having been chosen to represent this City in Parliament, and his business in London increasing, he removed thither. He fent £3000. at one time, by a private hand, to free the debtors in Ludgate. At another time he sent 1000l. to relieve the poor at Whitechapel. Heannually freed debtors for small debts in Whitechapel prison and the Marshalsea; and twice a week had a quantity of beef, drest, which with the broth was difffibuted to all the poor around him. In his more advanced years, he lived a retired and devotional life at Mortlake in Surry. His partiality and great benefactions to Briftol are well known: and notwithstanding all his public donations, he left more then £100,000 among his relations and dependents. What adds greatly to his character, is, that he performed his principal works of charity in his life and health, he delighted in beneficence, was an excellent and eminent example to the opulent of posterity, and deferves, in Bristol, something more than the ringing of bells to perpetuate his memory: a statue of brass, on a pedestal of marble, erected on St. Augustines-place, opposite to the school he founded.

Sir William Draper was the fon of a Custom-house officer of this port, who placed him under the Rev. Mr. Bryant, master of the Cathedral grammar-school. He effected with great condust and resolution the reduction of the Manilla and Phillippine islands in 1762, and was created Knight of the Bath. He lived afterwards some years at Cliston, and engaged in a controversy with the celebrated Junius in defence of the marquis of Granby, and showed simfelf as able at the pen as the sword. He left Cliston and lived at Bath, from which he removed to London, where he died.

Thomas Chatterton was born in Bristol on the 20th of November 1752. His father was master of the charity-school in Pile screet, one of the fingers at the Cathedral, and fexton of Redcliff church, which last office his ancestors had held for near a century and a half. He died before the birth of his fon, who received some infiructions from a Mr. Love, the fuccessor of his father in the school, from which one of the greatest human geniuses in the world, was returned to his mother as too dull to learn. His own parent then undertook his education, and taught him to read, and he taught bimself whatever he could acquire. He was, in general, serious and penfive; and often feemed to be lost in thought. In his childhood he commenced an author and a poet, and there is a copy of verses called the apostate, still extant, and written by him at a very early period of his life. He was a great reader, eager after books on every subject; and it appears that in one year he had read upwards of feventy. He was admitted into Coliton's-school in August 1760; while he remained there, he was a poet, and acquainted with poets, Mr. Thiftlethwaite (a kindred genius) was his cotemporary and companion. He left the school in August 1767, and was employed by a Mr. Lambert an attorney, as a scri vener. He wrote a lampoon on his late school-master, for which he was beaten by the sapient and merciful attorney. He had very little to do while with him, being in general employed not above two hours in a day, fo that he had sufficient time for reading and composition. He had an enthusiastic passion for gothic buildings and ancient english verses. When at a certain place in the fields, he would lay himself down, view Redeliss-church, as if enraptured, and utter ejaculations concerning the structure, and the demolition of part of the spire. He read books of heraldry, divinity, aucient poztry and chivalry. Mr. Green a bookfeller now living, supplied him with many ancient volumes of poetry, and also with Chaucer's works, the whole gloffary to which he transcribed. He had feveral other gloffarys of ancient words, and being ignorant of any dead or foreign language made a great progress in mimickry of ancient English. When Brittol-bridge was opened, he composed an account of the ceremonies used at the opening of the former bridge 500 years before. He wrote this on an old parchment, which a Mr. Rudhall faw him prepare for the purpose of deception, Finding that some wise ones were taken in by this effort, he proceeded to compose various poetical pieces which he ascribed to a pretended Thomas Rowley, of the 15th century. His spelling was ancient, his diction, phraseology and figures were modern; and the old words he used, taken from various authors were the words of two or three centuries. All his pretended antiques, poetic or profaic, were, to discerning well informed persons, evident impostures. The late Rev. Mr. Catcott, vicar of Temple, knew him well, pronounced his abilities to be equal to the composition of his productions, and believed him to be their author; and observed that he had transfused into one of his old works the matter of a conversation that had passed between them a few days before. Mr. Barrett surgeon, and a Mr. George Catcott, of Briftol, received his imitations and in some fort patronized him. He sent fome specimens of his poetry, and some account of ancient painters of Briftol, all entirely fictitious, to Horace Walpole Efq. who immediately discovered them to be forged imitations. Mr. Lambere having found a letter on Chatterton's writing desk intimating an intention of his destroying himself (perhaps being not thoroughly pleased with himself for exerting his abilities, to deceive) dismissed him. He then went to London to write for the bookfellers, and his works, antique and modern appeared in the Town and Country magazine, and many other periodical papers. It appears by his letters that he was well paid; and we have no account of the causes of his coming to want. But alas! he became necessitated, fome fay diseased, and was too proud to accept affiftance from his friends. Once indeed a neighbouring apothecary, suspecting him to be hungry, prevailed on him to eat some pickled oysters, which he devoured with great avidity. A woman who knew that he had fasted for three days, solicited him to dine with her, which he refused, afferting that he was not hungry. In these circumstances the unhappy, but scientific and valuable youth, took a fatai quantity of opium, and deprived the world and his friends of one of the greatest geniuses that ever lived in it, he was then about 18 years ald. His works have been fince published, some who were not by nature and information qualified to judge of them, were taken in. The late Dr. Mills dean of Exeter, injured his reputation in the learned world, by afferting and attempting to prove the real existence of Rowley and Turgot, and the antiquity of Chatterton's poems, which were written in a modern stile, not known at the period for which they were composed. Mr. Warton, Mr. Tyrwhitt, and Mr. Malone sound them to be forgeries and imitations. In April 1776, Dr. Johnson and Mr. Boswell went to Bristol to enquire upon the spot, concerning the authenticity of "Rowley's poetry." They called on Mr. Barrett and saw some of the pretended originals, which they found were executed very artificially, but from a careful inspection of them, and a consideration of the circumstances with which they were attended, they were fully satisfied of the imposture, which had already been clearly demonstrated from their internal evidence.

This very ingenious and fensible youth was in religion, a Theif, and in politics a Whig. It is absurd for those who did not believe him capable of fabricating Rozuley's poems to propose the erecting a monument to the memory of his abilities; but if natural genius, close application, early acquisition of science, and truly poetic compositions ever merited a public and lasting memorandum, those of Chatterton did, who if he had possessed courage to live for happier times, might have been one of the principal ornaments of his City and Country.

Mr. fames Thistlethwaite, native of this City, now resident in London, already mentioned as a cotemporary with Chatterton, has been the ingenious author of several novels and poems, and various other miscellaneous productions. He is at present in some reputable department of the law.

Mrs. Ann Yearsley, a favorite child of nature, whose genius and mental powers have distinguished her among, the literary. Her publications, mostly poetic, are numerous, and pleasing proofs of her good sense and large benevolence. Mrs. Y. now keeps the circulating Library at the Horwells, and we cannot but wish to her all due attention and liberal encouragement.

The reader is not to suppose that these are accounts of all the eminent and literary persons who were natives of Bristol. There are in Barrett's history, memoirs of many other respectable personages, the names and characters of a few of whom, have been noticed in the former parts of this work. The mere names of the others we shall not insert, as such nominal lists are of little or no utility; and therefore we have omitted them and other lists, to leave room for more important matter and proper information; and to render all our pages readable and useful.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of the HOTWELL.

Its fituation, ancient use, nature and properties of the Water, its particular wirtue and efficacy in warious disorders. Concerning St. Vincent's rocks, CLIFTON, the great increase of buildings there, and the discovery of another EXCELLENT MINERAL WATER.

THE warm ipring or fountain called the HOTWELL, is one quarter of a mile westward from the liberties or boundary of Bristol, in the parish of Clifton, on the Glocestershire side of the River Avon. Such an excellent spring, so warm, and so copious as to discharge (according to the best accounts) so gallons in a minute, could not escape the notice of our ancestors, and especially of the sailors who were so often passing up and down the River, and who had eyes to see, and knew heat from cold, as well as their fuccessors.

There is a tradition that failors (and doubtless other people) used it externally for scorbutic complaints and for healing fores. There was anciently a refervoir of brick made for it and thus it remained till the beginning of the last century. The earliest topographer of Briftol, William of Worcester who wrote in 1480, mentions it twice in his book. Page 185. " Fons ibidem in parte " de Gbyfton Cliff, in fundo aquæ, et est ita callidus, ficut lac, vel " aqua Badonis," which may bear the following translation: In the same place is a fountain, on the side of Ghyston Cliff towards the bottom of the River, and it is so warm as milk, or like the water of Bath. And again, page 223. " Fons callidus emanat de profundo aquæ " Avyn, ficut est Bathonia." The hot well flows out from the lower part of the River Avon, and is like the water of Bath. For the reader will be pleased to observe, that on its immediate efflux from the rock, the water is much warmer than when it is pumped up for drinking; and also that it feels and taftes warmer in winter than in summer, and in very cold days it heats the gials into which it falls from the cock.

At about twenty fix fect below high water mark, and ten feet above low water, this falutary spring rises forcibly out of an aperture in the folid rock. Dr. Randolph in his treatise on this water attributes its first reputation to its efficacy in the stone and gravel. In the former part of the last century it was reforted to for various diforders cutaneous and internal; and in the latter part, about 1670 it was rendered more famous by being found a specific in the diabates. The story of Gaggs the baker I advert to with reluctance, his cure having been the consequence of a dream. It was rather a superstitious piece of business: he was, we are informed, seized with a diabates, and as he lay fo very ill that he was despaired of, he dreamed that he had drank plentifully of this water, and was much refreshed by it. He foon procured some of it to quench his thirst, and after using it a few days, he came abroad, and recovered to the furprize of his acquaintance. It was well for Gaggs that the water cured him, and were the cure mentioned without the dream it would be much better. The virtues of this mild and healing spring, becoming more generally known, and its reputation and uses attracting more patients, strangers as well as refidents, the Corporation of Bristol took on them to provide for the convenience of vifitants, and for the reception and use of the water. In 1661, the fum of f 100 was issued out of the chamber by order of council to make the way from the City, by Rownbane passable for coaches and horses to the Hotwell. In 1691, Sir John Knight mayor of Bristolto prevent the tide from mixing with the spring, raised a work of stone around it higher than the tide ever rose, but the weight of the water inclosed, endangered the loss of the fpring by altering its course. In 1695, the company of merchants of Bristol, who are lords of the manor of Clifton, granted a leafe for building to Sir Thomas Day, Robert Yates, Thomas Callowhill Efgrs. and feveral other citizens, who recovered the spring, erected the Hotwell-house, made proper foundations for pumps which raise the water 30 feet high, and contrived pipes through which the waste water of the spring might run into the River: in these pipes are valves which open to let the water out, but that when the river water is coming in,

Many experiments have been made by several eminent physicians to discover the distinguishing properties of this water. It is natural to suppose that in its subterraneous passage through the rocks, over different strata and among such a variety of mineral and other substances it must be impregnated with their several virtues. In the common spring water of the neighbouring rockhouse, Farenbeit's thermometer stood at 50 degrees, the water of the Hotwell taken immediately from the pump raised it to 76, and as the heat of a person in health seldom exceeds the degree of 96, it follows that the Bristol water is little more than three squrths of the human heat.

The learned Doctors, Brookes, Sutherland, Randolph, Keir and others have largely treated on this excellent and uleful water; from their labours and our own observation, we shall introduce a few necessary particulars concerning its properties and uses: When received into a glass from the spring, it appears sparkling, and abounding with air-bubbles which rife from the bottom and fides to the surface, as if it were in a state of fermentation; and is also of a whitish colour, which gradually goes off as it grows cold. nor can any degree of heat ever after raise it to a similar colour. And therefore they who would have it in perfection, should drink it at the spring, where it has a delicate, foft, milky taste, beyond that of any other medicinal water that is known in England. It appears perfectly pellucid; and though it is so warm and soft to the taste, it is in reality hard, and will not dissolve soap equably, but curdles it into white masses. It will not wash linen, or extract the virtue of tea fo well as common water, but after exposure to the air for about three weeks or longer, it will answer these purposes full as well. It leaves a fensation of dryness on the palate, is perfeetly without smell; pleasing and grateful to the stomach, cooling, and quenches thirst. Bath waters are beneficial when the fecretions from the blood are diminished. Bristol when too much in. creafed; Bath attenuate powerfully; Bristol incrassates; Bath is spirituous and helps defects; Bristol is more cooling, and suppresses plenitude, with its consequences, inflammations and hæmorrhages. If we may judge of the contents of Bristol water from its effects, which are exceedingly deterfive and healing, it partakes of chalk, lapis calcarius and calaminaris: it fills ulcers with flesh and cicatrizes them.

Another author observes, that the Bristol water is found to contain an earth resembling levigated pearls; so subtile and fine that no art can imitate it, suspended by means of fixed air, together with vitriolic, and a small portion of marine salts.

Doctor Higgins, one of the first lecturers and teachers of chymistry in London having been at great pains particularly to analyze this water, has found that a Winchester gallon contains

And that it moreover contains eight ounce measures of acidulous gas, beyond the quantity retained by the calcareous earth in the heat of boiling water; and two ounce measures of air, equal, if not superior to atmospheric air in purity.

But whatever the substances are that impregnate it; from its fpecific lightness above other waters, it is plain that there is but little of a terrestrial or corruptible part in it. It receives no taint through length of time or alteration of climate, but retains its purity in whatever part of the world it is sent to, which occasions a great and continual demand for it abroad, so that it may now be procured in most foreign countries.

This water is equally warm, good and falutary at all times in the year, winter as well as fummer; and there are many confiderable persons and families who have made the Hotwells or Clifton their stated places of residence for the benefit of drinking it; therefore, they who wish to try and experience its virtues, need not delay till the spring or summer, but immediately have recourse to this healing sountain.

When we consider how agreeable this water is to fight, smell and taste, how clear, pure and soft: its gentle degree of heat, so adapted to various diseases, and the many cures wrought by it on those who prudently apply to it in time, it appears that it has an undoubted title to a place in the sirst class of medicinal waters,

The proper method of preparing it for being drank by those who cannot take it at the fountain head, is to place a bottle of the water in a pan as deep as the bottle is high, to draw the cork of the bottle, to pour hot or boiling water into the pan up to the neck of the bottle; to let the bottle fland a few minutes, and the water will have nearly the same degree of heat it had when taken from the spring: thus it is rendered more agreeable to the taste, and its virtues have greater power of exertion.

The celebrated uses of Bristol Hotwell water are to temper an hot acrimonious blood, to palliate or cure consumptions, weakness of the lungs, hellic fewers and heats. It is successfully prescribed in uterine and other internal hæmorrhages and in inflammations, in spitting of blood, dysentery, immoderate flux of the menses, in the fluor albus, and perulent ulcers of the viscera. It is of great use in old diarrheas, in gleets and especially in the diabates for which it is particularly extolled; and in other cases where the secretions are too much increased, and the humors too thin; in the stone and gravel, and the stranguary; in colliquative sweats, in nervous atrophy, in scorbutic and rheumatic cases, in colics, the gout, loss of appetite and indigestion, in the venereal disease, and both internally and externally in cancers and the king's-evil. In these disorders Bath waters are not only improper but hurtful; they are at variance with a milk course, and the Bristol water cannot often be judiciously directed without the use of a milk diet or some cooling, nutritive regimen.

Doctor Keir observes "It has been found that consumptions even in their last stages, when the obstructed part of the lungs were come to suppuration, and an ulcer was manifest, when the body was wasted almost to a skeleton, when nocturnal sweats were pro fuse, and even colliquative diarrhoas were common, that a sudden ftop has been put to the rapid career, the symptoms gradually mitigated, and a recovery at last obtained by the regular and long continued use of this water and a strict milk diet." And in scorbutic and convulsive colics, spasms, and convulsions, the Doctor informs us, that the water has succeeded beyond imagination. Concerning the diabates, he observed, " Among all the remedies hitherto recommended for the cure of a diabates, none comes up to the medicinal water of Bristol; this of late years has been reputed almost a specific in this distemper, and certainly not without reason, fince daily experience proclaims the truth." And further he informs us that "In general, the use of these waters is both innocent and fafe, notwithstanding their powerful virtues: the patients in most cases may drink freely of them and without referve; and though it is not always fo, yet if any one will venture without directions, I know of no medicinal water, in the use of which a person may with less risque be his own physician."

This water is principally drank by vifitants in the spring, summer and autumn, but by many stated residents all the year, who have found the water and the salubrious air of Cliston so beneficial and strengthening to their constitutions, that they have fixed their abode here. In consequence of this, there are now Balls and Assemblies in winter as well as summer. In the summer there are undoubtedly more opportunities, and better conveniences for the free enjoyment of the air and the use of exercise, which in many diffempers contribute not a little to the cure.

Medical preparations for drinking this water are not always necessary. It may in general be safely ventured on by the visitant. But in particular cases, the physician will prescribe according to the state and strength of the patient.

The usual method of taking the water, is to go to the pumproom in the morning and drink a glass of it which contains half a pint, and then to sit down with the company about half an hour. A band of musicians perform every morning during the season; each person who chooses, subscribes sive shillings to them. For those who prefer exercise to sitting, there is a colonade with shops, built under the rocks, and a gravelled parade about 800 feet long, shaded with trees, by the side of the River, so that the company may enjoy a dry and pleasant walk when it rains, or an airy, cool, and shady walk in the warmest season: also during the influx and efflux of the River, they may be entertained with the sight of the ships and vessels that generally pass up or down. When the half hour is expired, another glass is to be drank; and at about sive o'clock in the afternoon the same quantity is to be repeated. This is to be continued for the first two or three days, after which the water may be increased to three glasses before breakfast, staying some proper time between each, and to as many in the afternoon.

These six glasses a day are generally the quantity drank by each person while remaining at the Hotwell, which is so far from being thought a task, that it is done with pleasure and by some with avidity, the water being so relieving, grateful, and pleasant to the taste.

Some who have not fuddenly found a great alteration for the better, have imagined that the water has failed of use to them; the effects of this water tho' flow are fure, as patience and perseverance will convince them who are curable and to whose cases they are fuitable. Many who have drank this water for fome time, and thought that they had received no benefit, and went away, have found the advantage foon after, have repented that they had not drank it longer, and have returned at the first opportunity to renew their potation. In a word, it is physically impossible that in many of the disorders before mentioned, such a mild, healing, medicinal water, and fuch excellent and most falubrious air as that of Clifton and the adjacent downs, hills and fea, can be ufclefs, therefore they evidently must be useful to all who refort to them for pleasure or curation. For the strengthening of delicate constitutions, and the purification of those that are corrupted, such water and falubrious air cannot be found together in the Kingdom.

It is earnessly recommended to those who have tender lungs and delicate frames, not to delay an application to the remedies which bountiful nature presents in this place, till it be too late: and also to the gentlemen of the faculty, not to detain their consumptive patients under their treatment, till their cases become desperate, but to fend them in time, when perhaps the water and air with a very little medical affistance, may perfect their cure.

The feason commences commonly about April, or the beginning of May, and continues till the end of September or October, and has generally a great refort of company, who have excellent accommodations of every kind; provisions are plenteous and at reasonable prices, the vegetable productions, early, copious and excellent; and for those who cannot walk, or who prefer to ride, there is one of the finest countries in the world for carriages or horses. The downs are near to the Wells, losty and spacious, covered with verdure all the year, and abound in odoriferous plants and herbs, which diffuse a sweet smelling savor; they are enlivened by the most agreeable prospects on every side, and the refort of the company who daily take the air here in carriages and on horses. From hence are seen the Bristol river quite down to Kingroad or the Severn sea, and the ships moving or lying at anchor there, and (beyond the Severn) the lofty mountains of Wales: and the cool refreshing breezes from the sea, even in the hottest weather, ftrengthen and refresh the lungs.

These are various amusements for the company at the Hotwells. They whose strength will permit, frequently sail down the River in boats, fometimes accompanied by mufic, which, when echoed and re-echoed by the rocks, has a most delightful effect, not only to those on water, but to auditors on land. Companies often fail down as far as Portshead; and if they take cold collations with them, go ashore and dine in the woods, which are shady, cool, rural and extremely pleasant: through the various apertures of thefe, there are views of the Briftol-channel, Steep and Flat Holms, the opposite Welch mountains, and adjacent country. Many ladies and gentlemen, cross the River at Rownham ferry, and walk to the sweet and wholesome village of Ashton to eat strawberries or rasberries with cream; a delicious and falutary repast. Kingswesten inn on the hill has numerous visitors from the Hotwells. This hill commands beautiful prospects of the Bristol-channel, the mouths of the Avon and Severn, of the ships at anchor in Kingroad, and part of fouthern Wales.

There are three fets of large, elegant public rooms; the first, is called, the old, or upper Long-room, kept by J. Barton: the fecond, on the opposite side of the street, is called the lower, or New Longroom, kept by J. Ferry. At these are public breakfasts during the season, every Monday and Thursday alternately, with cotillions and country dances, for which each person pays 1s. 6d. The Balls are on Tuesdays: subscription to which is one guinea at each room, and for walking in the rooms and gardens, and reading the papers 5s. Subscribers to the Balls are allowed two tickets, which admit two ladies: non-fubscribers pay 5s. each ball. third fet of rooms are at Clifton, entitled YORK house, Hotel and Tavern. This has an elegant Ball-room with a good organ: and commands a picturefque view of Leigh woods and the downs. The whole huilding is a capital Hotel, handsomely fitted up, and extremely well calculated for parties who arrive here, or make excursions for a few days to this delightful spot. It is kept by W. Evans, and is fituated in Glocefter-place.

The master of the Ceremonies at the Wells, is William Pennington Esq. who is distinguished in the rooms by wearing a medallion of gold and a ribbon. In 1785 this gentleman was inducted to the office, which (as at Bath) is attended with emolument as well as honor; every stranger who visits the Hotwells pays him an acknowledgment for his attention. Soon after his election, he directed that the following regulations should be hung up in the rooms for preserving the dignity of the public entertainments, viz.

The Master of the Ceremonics, whose inclination coincides with his duty to conduct the entertainments of this place with proper decorum, yet without unnecessary restraint, requests the favour of the company to attend to the following rules:

Ift. That a certain row of feats be fet apart at the upper end of the room, for ladies of precedence, and foreigners of fashion.

2d. That every lady who has a right to precedence, deliver her card to the Master of the Ceremonies on her entering the room.

3d. That no gentleman appear with a fword or with spurs in these rooms, or on a ball night in boots.

4th. That after a lady has called her dance, her place in the next is at the bottom; and for the future it is to be understood that no lady of rank can avail herfelf of it, after the country dances are begun.

5th. That on ball nights, when minuets are danced, ladies who intend dancing there, will fit in a front row, for the convenience of being taken out and returning to their places.

6th. That on all occasions ladies are admitted to these rooms in hats, not excepting the balls given to the Master of the Ceremonies.

7th. That the subscription-balls will begin as soon as possible after seven o'clock, and conclude at eleven, on account of the health of the company.

8th. It is earnefuly requested, that when a lady has gone down the dance, she will be so polite, as not to retire till it is concluded.

W. PENNINGTON.

On the 1st of Nov. 1755, the Hotwell water suddenly became very red, and so extremely turbid that it could not be drank. All conjectures concerning the cause of this phenomenon were then in vain. In a few days time, the news of the earthquake at Lisbon gave a dreadful solution to enquiries concerning the change in the water; which ran soul a long time before it recovered its sormer purity.

On the very same day, the water of a well in a field belonging to Mr. John Harrison, near St. George's-church in Kingswood, which had been remarkably clear, became suddenly as black as ink, and continued unfit for use, nearly a fortnight.

Between Rownham and the Hotwell-house, rise on each side of the river a magnificent range of rocks, which are not more remarkable for their height, than for their being equally so on both sides of the river, the strata in some places answering on each side for about one mile and a half in a serpentine course. These constitute one of the greatest natural curiosities in England. The rock beyond the Hotwell and on the same side, is named St. Vincents, on the highest part of which was formerly a chapel dedicated to that Saint, who was a native of Spain and suffered martyrdom at Va-

sencia, A. D. 305, therefore the spring was called St. Vincent's well, which is now its properest name, as it is of the adjacent buildings or Town which it has occasioned. The chapel was standing in the time of William of Worcester, who describes it as being 27 feet long and o feet broad.

This grand rock of St. Vincent, which is 300 feet high, furnishes the natural philosopher with many curious fossils; the botanist with some scarce plants; the antiquarian with the remains of a Roman Camp, (see page 4) and the less curious enquirer with a view of the most associated and dreadful precipice. These rocks for the most part when broken up, are of a dusky red, brown or chocolate coloured marble, very hard and close grained, and on being struck with ahammer emit a strong sulphureous stench. This will bear a polish equal to any foreign marble; and when sawed into slabs and polished, it appears beautifully variegated with veins of white, bluish grey or yellow. It is frequently used for chimney-pieces, (of which there is an agreeable specimen in that of the pump-room;) but principally for making of lime, for which purpose there is not any stone in England so good as this, nor is any lime so strong, sine and white, which excellent properties occasion a very great demand for it from abroad.

Here and in the vicinity, men are daily employed in blowing up the rocks with gunpowder; vast fragments are frequently thrown down, and repeatedly strike the precipice with dreadful crash, and, with the loud report of the explosion, re-echoed from side to side by the lofty cliffs, make a grand and awful noise, which refembles thunder, and is sometimes by strangers mistaken for it. . Most fpectators of these rocks are of opinion that they were once united and were seperated by some terrible convulsion of nature. has been long talked of, to build a bridge of one arch from rock to rock over the Avon, and feveral plans and defigns have been produced to the public for that purpose. Some years ago, Mr. Vick, an eminent wine-merchant of Briftol, bequeathed f. 1000 towards this undertaking. But if the blowing of these rocks still continues, the defign will be rendered impracticable; and also their venerable appearance and grandeur will be diminished, therefore it is hoped that the company of merchants, who are lords of the manor of Clifton, will prevent their further demolition, especially as stone of the same quality may be procured on Durdham-down or lower down the river

In the fiffures and cavities of the rocks, are found these fine crystals called Bristol stones, or diamonds, some of which are so hard as to cut glass, are exceedingly clear, colourless and brilliant; and when set in rings in their natural state, have appeared of as high a polish and lustre, as if they had been wrought by the most skilful lapidary.

Words

Words fail to express the grandeur and richness of the scenes. rocks, shrubs; trees, flowers, herbs, plants and, productions of this incomparably pleafant and healthy part of the country. The ground on which we tread abounds with aromatic plants, the air is pure and perfumed with their refreshing fragrance, and inspires new life, health and chearfulnefs, the ear is delighted with the melodious notes and with the morning or evening fongs of a thoufand feathered fongsters, the eye gratified and the senses charmed, and the valetudinarian once more enjoys the bleffings of incipient ease and vigour.

CLIFTON is indubitably one of the most pleasant, healthy and elegant villages of the Kingdom; its air is fo remarkably pure and falubrious, that it has been long and by various authors stiled the montpelier of England. It commands a pleasing prospect over one corner of the City, and of the veffels failing up and down the Avon. On the opposite shore, the beautiful, wholesome and well cultivated part of Somerfetshire, completes the landscape. This rifes gradually four or five miles from the river to the top of Dundry-hill, on which is a lofty tower, ferving as a barometer, it, being generally enveloped with mists before rain, and when seen clearly indicates fair weather. The delightful fituation of Clifton, has long fince induced several opulent persons and families to make it their principal residence. And the continually new accessions of inhabitants have occasioned the hill to be almost govered with elegant piles of building and seperate mansions, most of which are built with freestone and deserve attention. The number of houses here and about the Hotwell below, have been lately much increated. St. Vincent's-parade under the rocks, and fronting the gravelled walk and river, is a new pile of freestone. Albermarle-row, Hope-square and Granby place are of late erection. Above these are others rifing in gradation to the top of Clifton-hill where the houses are airy and pleasant, and command fine prospects of the country around. There are on this hill, the Prince of Wales's Crescent; two noble piles of freestone inclosing a spacious walk called the MALL which is the beauty of Clifton; Richmond buildings, Boyce's buildings, Rodney place, York Crescent, and below that, another Crescent which is to be fronted with freestone; and on Clifton-down Sibn-row and Glocester-place, with many other new buildings which we have not room to particularize, and most of which are handsome, convenient comfortable dwellings, genteelly fitted up, and fuited to the purpoles of those who refort to the Hotwell for health or pleasure.

The general price for lodgings at the Hotwells or Clifton, is, 10s. a week for each room from the 25th of March to the 29th of September, from which time to the 25th of March, it is only 5s.

ror each room. Servants rooms at half price. The usual price for boarding is 16s. a week, above what is paid for lodging, and this at all feafons of the year. Servants are boarded at half price.

Elegant buildings are fo increased at Clifton that it no longer remains necessary to particularize a few dwellings as superior to the rest. This place bids fair to become a grand City, and with the buildings below, will constitute a fort of Westminster and Courtend of the Town to Briftol, it lying duly to the West of this ancient City.

Opposite to the church is the house of Mrs. Goldney, celebrated for a curious grotto, composed of a vast variety of rare and curious shells, brought from various parts of the globe; the interstices are enriched with Bristol and other stones, different kinds of spar, mundic, metallic ores, fossils and petrefactions. But we must refer the reader to the grotto itself; access to which is granted to proper persons by the lady of the mansion, who is one of the people rightly denominated the FRIENDS.

Farther on fronting Clifton down is a house that belonged to the late Sir William Draper, who erected to the western end of the garden before the front, an obelifk of freeftone, with a fhort latin inscription on its base to the late Earl of Chatham: and at the eastern fide a cenotaph with latin verses, and an english inscription to the memory of those departed warriors who fell in various battles and sieges in the East-indies, at Madras, Arcot, Ponditherry and Manilla; with the names of officers and lift of the battles.

It is recommended to the reader to visit the Roman camp on the top of Clifton-bill, where the remains of a windmill now stand; and to observe the marks of the ancient intrenchments and fortifications, where coins of the later Roman emperors have been frequently found.

In this land of wonders our readers will not be surprised to have a lately DISCOVERED MINERAL WATER announced to them. A few years ago was discovered by finking a well, at the house of Mr. Davis, at the Two Nag's-heads, in the street leading from Mardyke to the floating-dock, and Hotwells, an inestimable spring of water, of the Chalybeate, and other useful and excellent qualities; which good judges have esteemed to be far superior to any other mineral water of its kind in the Kingdom. It has been known, fince its discovery, to have performed many wonderful cures on persons, who were deemed incurable by by the faculty, in ferophulous, rheumatic and cutantous diforders. We hear that the refort of the public to participate of the benefits of this lately discovered and valuable mineral water, is continually increasing. It sharpens the appetite, raises the spirits and threngthens the body. Its efficacy is great and real, and is ready to be attested by those who have drank it, and found its falutary effects by happy experience.

Since some of the former sheets of this treatise concerning Bristol have been printed, a new Cotton-manufactory has been in stituted in Temple-street, which already employs upwards of 250 persons; and another of the Pontypool ware, on Temple-backs, which meets with great encouragement. The time of divine service at the Magdalen-chapel during the winter, is changed from the morning to the afternoon and is to begin at 3 o'clock.

This history and description of Bristol, were finished, October 28th 1793.

CHAP. XIX.

Of the Cities, Towns, Seats, and Curiofities of those parts of Somerset, that are in the neighbourhood of Bristol,

DATH, 12 miles S. E. from Bristol. This which was one of the finallest, is now one of the largest Cities in England. Its unrivalled, hot and excellent mineral water; its wholesome air; elegant buildings, good accommodations and variety of amusements, continually attract visitants and establish residents; so that it has been for many years, and is at present, increasing in beautiful houses and wealthy and polite inhabitants; is become, indisputably, the best built City in the Kingdom, and the provincial metropolis of fashion, taste and elegance. The ancient part of the City is fituated in a vale; and the modern on a rifing hill to the North. Each part has a fet of Assembly-rooms, of which the upper are the most spacious and sublime, and each has a Master of the Ceremonies. The fquares, obelifks, circus, crefcents, and many magnificent and regular piles, remind the literary traveller of old Rome, of which Bath is the nearest resemblance that this country can afford. The buildings that particularly deferve notice, are the lofty Cathedral, St. Michaels-church, and St. Mary's-chapel, (like St. Paul's Covent-garden, but in a superior stile) the Guildhall, the parades, Queen's and St. James's squares; the circus, the royal crescent; Landsdown-place and chapel; several beautiful streets, Milsom, Gay, Brock and New King streets; and over the new Bridge, Laura-place and Great Pultney-freet, 100 feet wide. This City is of confiderable extent, is a mile and a half long from S. W. to N. E; and stands in the first rank of English Cities, for magnitude, beauty and popularity. The paving and police of Bath are superexcellent. It has 5 churches and 6 chapels for the established religion, and 9 chapels and meeting-houses for most other denominations. Here are several hospitals, schools and public buildings, which with the whole City are built of freetione; and are governed by a mayor, recorder and common council. Three weekly newspapers are published here; and the whole Town, its buildings, waters, and abundance of noble and polite company, are some of the greatest curiosities in England. The lower part of the Town is much improving by act of Parliament. For particulars we refer the reader to both the Bath Guides in profe and verfe.

WELLS, about 20 miles from Bristol, a neat, pleasant, rural and healthy City, which has one of the finest Cathedrals in England, (St. Andrews) built by Robert de Lewes and Joseline de Welles; its outside has a most venerable appearance, and the western front is very magnificent, being an entire pile of statues much admired for ancient gothic imagery. It has one tower over the cross and two at the western end, in one of which is a fine peal of bells, the tenor of which weighs 3 tons. St. Cuthbert's church is a hand-some spacious gothic structure. The Bishop's palace, walled in and moated round; some ancient arches, and a new shire-hall built of stone, are worthy of attention. The streets are well paved. Near to this City are Wookey-hole and Chedder-cliffs.

DUNDRY, four miles and a half S. W. from Bristol, is the loftiest hill in this country, and commands most extensive views of Bristol channel downwards, coast and country of Wales, of the Severn upward, and to Malvern-hill in Worcestershire; of Bath, and eastward, of the White-horse in Wileshire, 35 miles off. This hill and its prospects are some of the greatest curiosities about Bristol, and well deserve a visit from curious travellers. The tower has a stair-case to the top; and has lately been repaired at the expense of £150. it was built in 1482.

PILL, on the S. fide of the Avon about 5 miles from Briftol; a Town chiefly inhabited by Pilots who tow the ships up and down the river.

CLEVEDON, 12 miles west from Bristol, the seat of Sir Abraham Elton Bart. The rider to this place will have most beautiful prospects of land and sea.

BROCKLEY COMB, 9 miles W. S. W. from Bristol, is much frequented and admired for its romantic beauty.

KINGSDOWN, 7 miles S. W. of Bristol; from whence is dug the colour called sheep's redding.

WRINGTON, 10 miles S. W. of Bristol. Here are dug and prepared zinc and lapis calaminaris. And here was born Mr. John Locke, author of the essays on human understanding and on government.

STANTON DREW, 6 miles S. of Bristol. Here are several remarkable stones in three different circles, supposed to be the remains of a druidical temple.

BRISLINGTON

BRISLINGTON, 2 miles S. E. from Bristol. In the churchyard is a stone with the following inscription: "1542, Thomas Newman aged 153,"

KEYNSHAM, in the road to Bath, a market Town, 5 miles from Bristol; has a spacious old church with a good tower and 8 bells. It is also noted for snake or serpentine stones; and cakes made of elvers or small eels.

ASHTON has the feat of Sir John Smith Bart. built by Inigo Jones.

CHAP. XX.

Of some Towns, Seats and Curiofities in the county of Glocester, and vicinity of Bristol.

A LMONDSBURY, 7 miles E. from Bristol, has a church with a spire; and a good inn on the hill, from whence there is a fine prospect of the Severn sea and adjacent country.

AUST-PASSAGE, 11 miles N. from Briftol. Here, is a ferry to cross the Severn, two miles over. The house has good accommodations for company, and commands extensive prospects. Here King Edward the elder summoned Leoline prince of Wales to cross the Severn and confer with him, which he rusused to do. Therefore Edward passed over to him, who on seeing the King in the boat threy his robes on the ground, and leaping into the water, said, "Most wise King, your humility has conquered my pride, and your wisdom triumphed over my folly, &c."

BADMINGTON, the feat of the Duke of Beaufort, about 16 miles N. E. from Bristol; a magnificent mansion or rather palace, with a park inclosed by a wall about 10 miles in circumference.

BLAIZE CASTLE, 4 miles N. from Bristol, is a large triangular tower, on a fine eminence, commanding extensive and delightful prospects of the Severn, Bristol channel and welch mountains. This was built, and the woods planted and walks laid out, by the late Thomas Farr Esq. who was mayor of Bristol in 1775, and afterward resident in London.

COTHAM, a hill about a furling N. W. from Brittol. Here is a round tower or observatory 70 feet high, on which the spectator has fine prospects of Bristol, the land and sea. Here is dug a curious fort of rusticated stone, used for embellishment of pillars and gateways.

FRENCHAY, 4 miles N. E. from Briffol, a village that has many handsome houses, and two meeting-houses, one for the FRIENDS and another for the Prespyterians which has a tower and bell. At the eastern end of the common is a remarkable lusus mature, taken out of a quarry at Down-end; an entire, period muscle, of rearly 2 tons weight.

KINGSWESTON,

KINGSWESTON, 4 miles N. W. from Bristol, the seat of Lord de Clissord, a noble mansion of stone built by Sir John Van-brugh. Here is a capital collection of paintings, extensive gardens and plantations, and an incomparable hot-house. From this house, Kingsweston and Penpold hills are some of the most beautiful prospects imaginable, of the Avon, Severn, Channel and Wales.

NEW PASSAGE, of miles from Briftol; the Severn here is 3.

miles broad, and the Passage-house very commodious.

PEN-PARK HOLE, 5 miles N. from Bristol; a tremendous abyfs, about 300 feet deep, celebrated by various historians, and in the philosophical transactions. On the 17th of March, 1775, the Rev. Mr. Newnbam one of the canons of Bristol Cathedral, with another gentleman and two ladies, went to explore the depth of this terrible cavity. Mr. N. lowered a line, and being near to the dark aperture, that he might be fafer, laid hold of a twig that fprung from the root of an ash which grew at the mouth of it, but his foot flipping, the twig broke, and he was precipitated into this dreadful hell-kettle, in the fight of his aftonished and almost petrified friends. That morning he had officiated at Clifton church, and read plaim 88, in which are these words so descriptive of his catastrophe. "Thou hast laid me in the lowest pit, in a place of darkness and in the deep." Persons descended daily to search for the body, which was found 30 days after, floating on the water. particular account of this cavern is published by Mr. Geo. Catcott, with an explanatory copper-plate print, price 1s. 6d.

REDLAND, I mile N. W. from Bristol, has a beautiful seat called Redland-court, built by John Cossens Esq. from a design of Mr. Strachan Architect; and near it a very elegant chapel of freestone, with a turret containing a bell, crowned with a dome of lead, ball and cross; a miniature resemblance of St. Paul's at London.

STOKE BISHOP, 2 miles N. W. from Bristol, where is a fine old mansion, the seat of Lady Lippincott. About a mile to the S. are a lofty house and tower of stone of a very good design, standing on the brow of a high cliff that rises from the bank of the river Avon; this building which greatly embellishes these parts and prospects, is called Cook's Folly.

STOKE-HOUSE, 3 miles N. E. from Bristol, the feat of the Dutches Dewager of Beaufort. The late Lord Botelourt rebuilt it about the year 1760, and it is now a very noble mansion, on a sine verdant hill; the surrounding woods, temples and monuments well deserve the travellers attention, and in the summer may be justly stiled, a terrestrial Paradise.
